Italian Guns Captured as Rebels Flee In Disorder

Bombs Hurled on Troops Routed From Front at Guadalajara.

Towns Are Taken In Loyalist Drive

50 Truck Loads of War Supplies Fall to Madrid Forces.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 21.—Government forces extended their victory on the Guadalajara front today, pressing forward in the wake of a rapid insurgent retreat and occupying several new towns, said Government accounts of the operations northeast of Madrid.

Some reports placed the main government army in the vicinity of Almadrones, 32 miles northeast of Guadalajara on the highway to Zaragosa.

Recapturing of that town, which fell at the first insurgent onslaught two weeks ago, would mean recovery of all territory lost in the insurgent offensive that has been rolled back.

The government reported its troops reached Cogollor, on the road from Cifuentes and 8 miles from Almadrones, and claimed capture of Yela, a small village to the south of Cogollor.

Sixty-two more Italians were captured today, the defense junta announced.

At only one point is serious insurgent resistance reported today, at Padilla de Hita, 20 miles north of Guadalajara on a road branching off to the west of the main highway. There a government force coming up to protect the left flank of the main column advancing along the highway attacked an insurgent force making a stand and was almost cut off.

Insurgents Retreating.

Latest reports said this battle was going in favor of the government troops.

East of the highway there was no serious opposition to the advance, and on the road itself the government column was unable to establish contact with the enemy.

Reports continued to tell of the utter rout of the insurgents above Guadalajara. Fifty truck loads of war material and personal effects abandoned by fleeing insurgents already have been brought back to Madrid and much remained to be collected.

Included in the spoils were large numbers of Italian hand grenades, many field guns and trucks.

A Madrid communique said government airplanes dropped 52 500-pound bombs on insurgent troops and supply trains at Siguenza, above the Guadalajara battlefield. One bomb dropped on the railway station caused a great explosion and was believed to have destroyed a gasoline depot.

Plane Is Shot Down.

Twelve insurgent airplanes arrived to fight off the raid and one was shot down.

The government continues to offer evidence of Italian participation in the civil war. Today it published a document which it said was a message of greeting from the Fascist Grand Council to "our 50,000 comrades who are fighting in Spain."

This document, said to have been issued at Salamanca March 3 in the name of "Gen. Manzini," was captured on the Guadalajara front, the government said.

Reports from the front south of Madrid said government troops were holding their lines at Pozoblanco against repeated enemy assaults. They said 1,300 insurgents had been killed in the fighting up to date on that front.

Bombs Fire Forest.

Talavera de la Reina, Spain, March 21 (AP).—A forest fire blazed above the Guaralajara battle field today as the result of yesterday's action in which insurgent airmen used incendiary bombs to blast government machine-gunners out of their positions.

Scouting planes cleared the way for a tri-motored bomber, which swooped low over a forest between Torija and Trijueque—both on the Guadalajara-Zaragosa highway—and dropped bombs which lighted the tinder-dry pine trees. The fire forced government machine-gunners to flee their positions and seek new shelters.

Despondent Man Puts Head in Oven, Ends Life by Gas

Unemployed two years and in ill health, Leonard Marks, 39, father of three children, committed suicide yesterday by putting his head in an oven after turning on the gas in his home at 100 Wilson avenue, Colmar Manor, Md.

His body was found, slumped in a chair with his head in the oven and both burners turned on full, by a daughter, Mrs. A. B. Calhoun, of Hyattsville, and her husband who had come to pay him a visit.

Acting Coroner William A. Bobb, of Cottage City, ruled the case a suicide, while Prince Georges County police recalled an earlier attempt by Marks to take his life by poison.

Marks also leaves a son, Charles, 16, and a daughter, Dolores, 8, and his wife, Mrs. Scola Marks.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the home of a sister, Mrs. Grace E. Naylor, of 300 Allison street northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

JOHN H. CLARKE,

Only living former member of the United States Supreme Court who will speak over the radio on President Roosevelt's revision plan from his San Diego home this evening. Clarke, who retired from the bench in 1922, is expected to back the President.

Court Plan Foes to Present Case to Senate Group Today

Wheeler Scheduled as First Witness for Opposition; Clarke, Sole Living Ex-Justice, May Defend Proposal in Speech.

Concentrating chiefly on their demand that Congress submit a constitutional amendment to the States, shock troops of the opposition to the Presiden's court plans this week will counter friendly arguments presented during the past ten days in hearings of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The attack will be inaugurated today by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, who, with Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, is chief proponent of the amendment method to achieve the objectives President Roosevelt seeks to attain by addition of a justice to the Supreme Court for each member thereof over 70 years old.

Wheeler will be followed by Raymond Moley, Dr. H. W. Dodds, president of Princeton University, and Theodore Graebner, professor sumed he will do so from the fact among other witnesses, Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, said last night. Burke has been principal strategist thus far of the enemies of the proposals.

Far from remaining silent during this counter-barrage, the Administration and its sympathizers will continue their arguments with added vigor during this period.

The only retired justice of the Supreme Court now alive, John Hessin Clarke, of California, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace both will speak on the radio tonight. While it has not been stated definitely that Clarke will defend the President's suggestions, it is assumed he will do so rom the fact

Great Britain Plans to Boost Defense Fund

$23,087,500 More Asked as Protection Against Poison Gas.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 21. — Believing even its $7,500,000,000 rearmament program may not protect civilians against bombing attacks in war time, the British government intends to spend millions more in precautions against poison gas and incendiary bombs.

The Home Office, which in less troubled times devotes its energies to such matters as preventing cruelty to animals and administering prisons, is now the scene of almost as much war preparation as the out-and-out military departments.

$23,087,500 Asked.

Its special air raid precautions division has asked Parliament for an appropriation of $23,087,500 for the next 12 months alone—more than three times as much as it is spending during the 12 months ending March 31.

Authorities fear that even the much-publicized "balloon barrage"—a net which would be strung over cities, supported by balloons, to trap enemy aircraft—and Britain's hundreds of defending planes and anti-aircraft batteries may prove ineffective against persistent air raids.

Plan Gas Precautions.

The largest item in the home office air raid precautions bill is one to protect the populace against gas bombs. Of that total of $19,980,000, the home office plans to spend $18,650,000 in speeding up the program to provide 30,000,000 gas masks for the population of some 455,000,000.

During the fiscal year, which will end March 31, the government spent

Germany Faces Financial Peril, DeWilde Warns

Foreign Policy Aide Fears an 'Explosion' Unless Isolation Ends.

By Russell Smith.

"An explosion * * * leading to forcible territorial expansion" is predicted by Nazi Germany's progressive isolation from the rest of the world, a Foreign Policy Association report written by J. G. de Wilde warned yesterday.

The Hitler government's course toward self-sufficiency for Germany not only implies ultimately a planned economy, but has given that country a superficial industrial boom, but conditions there are "fundamentally far from sound," the report asserted.

The alternative to the "explosion" foreseen in the report, De Wilde says, is "the reintegration of Germany in the world economy." He went on, immediately, however, to add that "formidable obstacles face the resumption of complete economic and financial collaboration between Germany and other countries."

His findings thus form in effect a prediction that Germany will follow the course of Japan in China and Italy in Africa when the "severe strain and stress" he discovers in the Third Reich result in a domestic crisis.

Capital Contracting.

Asserting that if Nazi leaders push "to its logical conclusion" the refusal to co-operate in the political settlement proposed by France and Great Britain, "it should lead ultimately toward a planned economy," de Wilde discussed financial difficulties of Germany as follows:

"The fund of idle capital has ceased to grow and is definitely con-

Motive Hunted in Suicide Leap Of WPA Worker From Airliner

Bakersfield, Calif., March 21 (AP).—Motive for Anatole Maren's suicide plunge from an air transport over mountainous western Kern County presented a mystery tonight to authorities as they concluded a fruitless search for the San Francisco man's body.

Maren, a WPA worker, disappeared from a United Airlines transport last night en route from San Francisco to Los Angeles. He broke the glass encasing the handle of the plane's emergency door and hurtled down in the darkness as the ship passed over what is known as the Lost Hills section of Kern County, about 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Relatives of Maren in San Francisco said they knew no reason why he should want to end his life, but that he cleaned out the drawers of a desk in his home and disposed of several documents before he went to the airport. They said he seemed

Papal Letter May Stir New Nazi Breach

Hitler Newspaper Hints Reich May Cancel Vatican Pact.

Pope Uses Vigorous Words to Rebuke Reich Regime.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 21.—A fresh breach between Nazi Germany and the Roman Catholic Church was in prospect tonight as the result of a vigorous pastoral letter by Pope Pius XI circulated to the Catholics of Germany.

The Pope in his message, dated March 14 from the Vatican, which astounded even German Catholics, accused the Nazi regime of having violated the German-Vatican concordat of 1933 and encouraging anti-Christian movements.

(A Berlin Associated Press dispatch, dated Monday, says: "A hint that Germany may cancel her concordat with the Vatican was voiced today in a front-page editorial of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter following circulation yesterday to German Catholics of a vigorous pastoral letter from Pope Pius XI.

("The editorial was interpreted as an answer to the Pope's communication, in which the Nazi regime was accused of having violated the German-Vatican concordat of 1933 and of encouraging anti-Christian movements, though the document was not mentioned.

("Even an agreement with the Holy See has not sacrosanct, untouchable and eternal value," the editorial said.

("It must adjust itself to changing conditions if it is not to become ineffective.

("Editor in chief of the paper is Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, neo-pagan movement leader and head of the Nazi Party's foreign political division.")

The principles of the Catholic faith were presented in the Holy Father's pronouncement in such sharp contrast to the philosophical teaching of Naziism that Catholic circles in Berlin tonight fully expected the Nazi government to cancel the concordat.

Delivered Secretly.

The Pope's letter arrived in Berlin only late last night. It was delivered to the various parishes secretly by automobile messengers. At the Berlin Cathedral it was read by Count Konrad von Preysing-Lichtenegg-Moos, Bishop of Berlin.

Late this afternoon the Bishop summoned all Berlin members of Catholic men's societies to a special meeting, in the course of which he told his flock of the gravity of the situation and adjured them to be prepared for an open fight with the Nazi regime.

Informed Catholic circles regarded the moment as well chosen psychologically for the church to bring its grievances against the Nazi regime into the open. It coincides with the Protestant opposition's fight against the general synodical elections which Reichsfuehrer Hitler has ordered held and with the removal from the Austrian cabinet of the pro-German Odo Neustaedter-Stuermer.

Message in Three Parts.

The Pope's pastoral letter was in three parts. The first dealt with the alleged breach of the concordat, which was concluded July 22, 1930, to end the conflict between Germany and the Holy See.

The second part dealt with faith in God, faith in Christ, the true church, the authority of the Pope and the morals, rights and duties of parents.

The third part reasserted the Pope's love even for those of his flock in Germany who have strayed from the right path and prays for the restoration of real peace between the church and state.

Reviewing the history of the concordat, the Pope said that he signed it, "despite grave misgivings, because we believed it to be to the interests of the church and the German people.

"Unfair Interpretation."

"If its terms were not kept that is not the fault of the church. The other side made unfair interpretation of the concordat, evaded its provisions, undermined its content, and finally more or less openly violated its stipulations and the unwritten law governing its actions."

Nevertheless, the Pope said, he did not cancel the concordat for the following reasons:

"Our paternal care for the welfare of the souls entrusted to us counsels us not to ignore such prospects as still remain, meager though they be, for returning to the concordat and to real understanding."

4 Persons Plunge To Death in N. Y.

New York, March 21 (AP).—Four persons in different sections of New York City were killed today in jumps or falls from windows.

Virginia Schwarte, 55, a public school teacher, said by friends to have been suffering from a nervous breakdown, plunged from a thirteenth floor window while a friend, Agnes Smith, of Newark, N. J., was in an adjoining room.

Marion Anderson, 50, who was under a nurse's care, leaped from a sixth floor window of her apartment.

Isidor Yankowitz, 30, jumped or fell from a second floor window of his home.

Mrs. Tessie Wright, 45, Negro, fell from a fourth floor window while hanging out some wash.

Charge of Unauthorized Pipe Line Quickly Challenged.

Foreman Tells Military Inquiry Connection Was Illegal.

By the Associated Press.

New London, Tex., March 21.—A gas company foreman told a military board of inquiry tonight "I know" the gas connection at the school where 455 explosion victims were killed was unauthorized. His testimony drew an immediate challenge from school officials.

D. L. Clark, Parade Gas Co. foreman, was the witness, adding in cross-examination it was "barely possible" that someone else in the company approved the connection, but that he doubted it.

"Absurd," retored E. W. Reagan, president of the London consolidated school board, later when informed of the testimony.

J. R. Keen, another board member, said that at least one official of the Parade company knew the school was obtaining gas from the company's line at the time of Thursday's disastrous explosion.

"We are not stealing any gas," Reagan said heatedly. "It is absurd to say that we were connected to the residue gas pipe line without the company's knowledge or permission."

Secret Connection Denied.

Kern told the Associated Press that Earl Clover, superintendent of the gasoline company, knew of the connection and it was common knowledge in the vicinity of the school.

"We didn't make any effort to conceal our connection to the Parade company's line," Kern said. "People all over this country make similar connections for their homes."

"We told Mr. Clover that we intended to tie on to the line. He said that the company tried to discourage such connections, just as the other companies do, but that he had no personal objection. He told us where we could find a regulator to put on our connecting line."

A residue line such as Clark mentioned carries away the gas remaining after natural gasoline has been extracted.

Clark's testimony was confirmed by Floyd Hunt, school mechanic and bus driver who declared he, with the janitors and a welder, made the connection.

While the inquiry progressed other East Texas communities expressed fear of similar tragedies.

General compliance was expected for Gov. James V. Allred's request that heating systems in all schools be examined for safety before use.

Board members of one school—at nearby Gaston—already had met to discuss their own system. Assurance from Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas chemical engineer expert, that "no similar disaster is likely to come to you, especially if you are careful," quieted alarmed officials and school will reopen there as usual tomorrow.

School officials at Hernderson, 12 miles from the wreckage of London's consolidated school, announced publicly today that there was no fear of such a happening and urged London's surviving students to resume their studies there.

Definite decision had not yet come from New London officials, still in deep mourning and paying little heed to anything but burying their dead, concerning the future of its survivors. Superintendent W. C. Shaw, himself slightly injured, had no official comment.

Only a pitifully few of New London's once heavy enrollment remain to travel by bus to the school at nearby Henderson.

J. H. Bunch, mathematics professor who walked out of the building two minutes before the blast, said he was "conductor" for one of the six buses which conveyed children to school.

Funerals Continue.

"We won't need those six buses now—one could carry all the students left. Guess we could put about 100 in the trailer we use."

Today dawned bright over the death-stricken community. The task

Jerusalem Police Battle Outlaws

Jerusalem, March 21 (AP).—Police battled with 20 outlaws in the hills of Acre district yesterday and captured two of them while elsewhere in the Holy Land Christian worshippers observed Palm Sunday in colorful procession.

The police took several guns from the two marauders, but the others, one of them wounded, escaped. The outbreak came only two days after Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, British high commisioner for Palestine, won sweeping dictatorial powers to curb violence.

Fifteen hundred friars, nuns, laymen and children marched in the Palm Sunday observance here, singing hymns and bearing palms and olive branches.

Hemingway Sees Rebel Gas Shells

Madrid, March 21 (U.P.).—Ernest Hemingway, American author, visited conquered territory near Brihuega today and saw three unexploded rebel shells which he said contained mustard gas. He identified them by markings and colored clips.

Fifty-two prisoners taken at Cogollo, were brought to Madrid and questioned by newspapermen. To prove they were Italians, they sang the Italian song, "Red Flag." Some Spanish loyalist officials joined the singing.

Landis Sit-Down Strike Talk Arouses Storm of Protest Here

Statement Labor Device May Be Embraced by Expanding Legal Concepts Assailed by Senators; Few Comments Favorable.

A fire of criticism, mitigated by only scattering favorable comment, greeted the speech of James M. Landis Saturday at Catholic University in which the Securities and Exchange Commission chairman told the Eastern Law Students' Conference sit-down strikes ultimately may be er-braced by expanding legal concepts.

From leading lawyers in both chambers of Congress, and in practice here, came condemnation ranging in tenor from restraint to bitterness. So intense was the emotion expressed by those in the latter category that the disapproval of Landis' speech was extended to a denunciation of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Lewis was accused directly by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, of permitting this newest labor weapon to be used and worthy to be branded "public enemy No. 1" unless he promptly calls an end to sit-down strikes.

Burke's strictures on Landis' views likewise were severe, while to his castigation was added that, in varying degrees, of Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho; Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and others.

Hearty agreement with Landis' words was expressed by Henry T. Hunt, an attorney formerly an official of the Public Works Administration and now a leading figure in the National Lawyers Guild, newly formed liberal organization. His opinion was representative of those who indorsed the view that expanding legal concepts ultimately will bless the sit-down.

In the midst of the storm over the sit-downs, now rivaling President Roosevelt's court plan as center of Capitol Hill interest, there were other important labor developments.

Secretary Frances Perkins announced a 138.5 per cent increase last month in placements by the United States Employment Service of persons in private industry, only the third time in history of the service such placements have exceeded the combined total of public placements and assignments to relief work.

The National Association of Manufacturers suggested legislation which would delay major strikes while an impartial commission appointed by Plans Revealed to 'Defend' Strikers in Chrysler Plants.

Governor Moving To Uphold Law

General Motor Walkout Threatened Today in Detroit Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 21.—Threats of a "general strike" tomorrow in the Detroit automobile industry heightened tension here today and increased prospects of a climax this week in the Chrysler strike.

Gov. Frank Murphy, called on to intervene for the second time within three months in a major automobile strike, communicated with corporation officials and leaders.

The Governor, having held a long conference with law enforcement officials, commented:

"We are organizing a united front of authority for the maintenance of authority. We intend that citizens be assured of their rights."

Murphy said the Chrysler strike, which has left more than 50,000 of the company's workers here idle for two weeks, was not discussed.

Close Watch Kept.

Today was quiet in the motor city, but pickets kept a close watch for any sign of an attempt to carry out a court order to eject them forcibly.

Fully 150,000 workmen were unofficially estimated to be without employment, temporarily at least, throughout the Nation, due to labor disputes as the week opened today.

Despite negotiation efforts of various governmental bodies, the new week opened with at least 20,000 more workers idle than a week ago.

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers Union who issued the "general strike" threat after police arrested 60 packing house strikers and routed about 150 women from a cigar factory Saturday, asserted:

"We consider these attacks a build-up for an attack on the automobile union sit-downs."

Another union leader, Ed Hall, second vice president, announced that if an attempt is made to arrest Chrysler strikers, the union would mobilize between 150,000 and 175,000 men "to defend the plants."

He said General Motors workers would be called out as "demonstrators."

Martin's announcement said the union was prepared to call a general automobile strike here "unless the brutal eviction of sit-down strikers and the ruthless clubbing of workers by Detroit police is stopped immediately."

There were no further police raids today on the other cigar factory strikers or any of the dozen sit-downs still in progress in unrelated factories and business places.

Martin said the big strike—if called—would include automobile parts plans in the city as well as automobile manufacturers.

He said it would not close the General Motors plants here in view of the agreement signed a week ago to settle issues of the recent strike.

Would Close Plants.

"However, if the police attempt to evict the Chrysler sit-down strikers," he added, "the General Motors locals will also go on strike.

"It should be explained that the General Motors walkout would be in the nature of a demonstration of sympathy for the Chrysler workers. It would in no sense be a strike for which negotiation would be necessary. The men would simply put on a demonstration and return to their jobs."

Martin did not mention the Ford Motor Co., which has been regarded as a nonunion concern for years, but in previous statements union leaders have claimed they were well organized in Ford plants.

Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert, who was criticized by Martin for the strike raids, remained silent on police plans in connection with Martin's call to "175,000 organized automobile workers" for a demonstration Tuesday night in downtown Cadillac Square.

The uneventful Sabbath day, sunny but crisp, brought one indication of union activity besides picketing.

In various parts of the city, U. A. W. A. offices remained open, possibly to pass along instructions for either the threatened general strike or the mass demonstration.

Small lines of pickets patrolled the Chrysler plants.

Lawlessness Charged.

Observers, looking for a clew to what may happen tomorrow—or the next day—watched to see whether police would continue raids on smaller sit-down strikers.

Murphy conferred with James L.

Seven Killed In Puerto Rico Political Riot

Police Cancel Parade of Nationalists, Fire on Demonstrators.

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 21. Capt. Felipe Blanco, district police chief in Ponce, said tonight seven persons were killed today in Ponce during a Nationalist riot.

The dead included civilians and one policeman, he reported. Besides a number of civilians, six policemen were wounded.

Reports received here said the conflict broke out when the Nationalists determined to carry out an unannounced afternoon parade for which they at first had received a permit, but which the police later ordered canceled.

Police were parading the streets in midafternoon, the reports said, and crowds were gathering when a Nationalist allegedly opened fire, wounding a policeman.

The police, who were armed with riot guns, sub-machine guns and tear gas, the reports continued, then opened fire on the crowd.

Riggs Murder Recalled.

Much of the disorder in Puerto Rico in recent years is laid at the door of the Nationalistic Party which under leadership of Pedro Albizu Campos has pushed the doctrine that the island is an unwilling vassal of the United States.

The assassination of Col. E. Francis Riggs, of Washington, insular chief of police, on February 23, 1936, was the work of two Nationalists, both of whom were killed by police after they murdered Col. Riggs.

As yet the Nationalists are a minority group on the island. In the last election, held on the same day as the Presidential election in this country, Republicans and Socialists again formed a coalition to defeat the independence plank of the Nationalists and Liberals.

3-Alarm Blaze On Conn. Ave. Snarls Traffic

2,000 Watch Spectacular Beauty Salon Fire; Damage $15,000.

A spectacular fire which blazed for an hour last night in the fashionable beauty salon by "Emile," at 1223 Connecticut avenue, resulted in $15,000 damage, according to the owner, and attracted 2,000 spectators, many of them en route to downtown theaters.

Three alarms brought 20 fire engines racing to the scene. A ladder quickly was extended four floors to the roof, amidst belching smoke, and the crowd saw firemen climb out of sight.

All motorcycle police in the city were summoned to direct the traffic jam which immediately snarled the main thoroughfare. Street cars were stalled for blocks, auto traffic slowly was untangled and sent into adjoining streets, as the throng in the plaza at Connecticut avenue and M street grew, finally filling the entire section.

Firemen said they believed the blaze originated in wiring in a four-story elevator shaft, the walls of which were wrecked by flames and water. The blaze leaped into a gymnasium and Turkish bath on the third and fourth floors of the building, destroying chambers where the Capital's smartest women were wont to take their beauty treatments.

Top Floor Recently Raided.

The top floor of the building figured in police news when it was raided two weeks ago as a gambling place.

Main part of the establishment was saved from destruction by a fire door which separated 1221 Connecticut from the annex at 1223. The elaborately furnished apartment of Emile Beauvais, on the top floor of the main building, housed the only people in the building at the

Preoccupied Drivers Menace To Safety of Others in Traffic

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

Feeble excuses for highway carelessness are offered by the majority of District traffic violators in repeated attempts to "justify" their offenses, the new safety patrol has found during its first week of operation.

Since last Monday, the patrol, with Traffic Policeman George M. Patton as "safety officer," has cruised city streets in search of flagrant infractions. Patton has visited major traffic centers, appearing without warning, to regulate and control the flow of vehicles. His principal purpose is to save lives and promote safety. But, on many occasions, he has been forced to listen to long "tales of woe" and reasons why the accused driver should be given "another chance." Instead of admitting their offenses, most drivers, it has been revealed, prefer to argue and attempt to "fix things up."

Most often used is the excuse:

"I wasn't paying much attention, I guess."

There is no greater driving danger, motorists have been warned, than failure to concentrate on traffic and regulations. A driver whose attention lags while behind the steering wheel is a potential killer, safety authorities point out.

Another favorite excuse for speeders is:

"I was in a hurry—I didn't look at my speedometer."

There is nothing so important that a driver must travel in a manner to endanger the lives of others, Patton has told violators.

A taxi driver was stopped by the patrol the other day and accused of leaving the curb without a hand signal. He nearly struck other cars attempting to pass. Said the taxi man to Patton's warning:

"Why, I have the greatest respect in the world for the law—I never drive carelessly."

But by this one act of negligence, the taxi driver could have caused serious damage and possibly death had another vehicle struck the front of his cab. Asked about this, the driver responded:

"Gee, I never thought of that."

And other drivers apparently believe they can avoid punishment by admitting their guilt. An example: The patrol stopped a motorist on Sherman avenue northwest for

Rail Pensions May Be Settled By Roosevelt

President Expected to Iron Out Differences of Treasury, Board.

By the Associated Press.

Informed officials said yesterday President Roosevelt may step in to iron out differences between the Treasury and railroad interests over a projected new rail pension system.

The plan, adopted voluntarily by rail management and labor at Mr. Roosevelt's request, was challenged by the Treasury on the ground that its taxes on employers and employe were too low to meet pension outlays. If income failed to level up with outgo, officials said, the difference would come out of general Government funds.

Under the plan, taxes starting at 2.5 per cent on both employers' pay rolls and employes' wages would increase gradually to 3.5 per cent on each in 1949.

The management-labor understanding provides that both would back the plan in Congress. It would supersede the 1935 retirement legislation now under court attack by the roads.

Treasury and Railroad Retirement Board officials plan to meet this week to go over Treasury objections to the taxing provisions.

Treasury officials indicated they would insist on the full 3.5 per cent tax of the present act. Chairman Murray W. Latimer, of the Retirement Board, said Treasury suggestions would be carefully studied in an effort to compose some plan agreeable to all.

Latimer and other Retirement Board members previously had approved the graduated levy starting at 2.5 per cent, however, and management and labor representatives have said this tax "will carry the load."

Unless the conference brings about an understanding, officials said the President probably will choose between the two tax rates.

Explaining the Treasury stand, authorities said it could approve no program calling for expenditures in excess of those provided in Mr. Roosevelt's budget.

"Pending instructions to the contrary from the President," one spokesman said, "we must be sure that adequate revenues are provided to meet any expenditures added onto the budget."

Moscow Promises Relief to Farmers

Moscow, March 21 (AP).—The government yesterday announced four decrees making important concessions to farmers with the purpose of providing relief for those hit by last year's drought and stimulating 1937 production by ensuring to farmers a larger share in the crops they produce.

Yesterday official figures showed that the spring sowing in the Soviet Union was far behind schedule, which was blamed on a backward spring in the south.

Most important of today's decrees was that canceling all arrears in 1936 grain deliveries by collective and individual farms throughout the Soviet Union.

Secrecy Is Urged In Air Base Sites

By the Associated Press.

The Congressional originator of a plan to establish a system of Army Air Corps bases said yesterday secrecy should shroud their location for some time to come.

Representative Wilcox (Democrat), Florida, who introduced the legislation, disclosed secrecy was due to a desire to forestall pressure from local civic groups and not to guard any military secre'

A report concerning the bases has been in the hands of the Secretary of War more than a year but, to date, only data on a proposed base near Tacoma, Wash., has been made public. The law provides for construction of six bases at strategic points in this country and Alaska.

"We've had an example of what might happen," Wilcox s·id, "as a result of announcement that the base for the Pacific Northwest area would be located at Tacoma. Chambers of commerce from Pocatello, Idaho; Seattle, Wash., and other cities descended on Washington by air in an effort to have the plans changed.

"If proposed locations for all six bases were made public, we'd be subjected to terrific pressure from all parts of the country."

Mooney 'Frame-up' Inquiry Is Asked

Representative William J. Fitzgerald (Democrat), Connecticut, is sponsoring a petition calling on President Roosevelt "to follow the precedent set by President Wilson and cause an immediate investigation in the Mooney case."

Fitzgerald, for four years a vice president of the Connecticut State Federation of Labor and for 25 years a member of the International Moulders Union of North America—a union with which Mooney was affiliated—says in the petition that "our union, churches, colleges and other bodies and millions of our best citizens" are calling for an investigation of Mooney's imprisonment over the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco in 1916.

Representative J. J. O'Connell (Democrat), Montana, in a circular letter supporting Fitzgerald's petition, says 50 Senators and Representatives have been interested favorably. He says his office can show positive governmental documents proving Mooney and Warren Billings "are not only innocent but were deliberately framed."

Lodge Prizes Two Huge Flags As Constant Reminder of Duty

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE, Jr.

Senate's Second Youngest Member Has Stars and Stripes, State Banner Dwarfing All Else in His Office; Calls Them Symbols.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

It's like taking beans to Boston to try to tell Washington readers anything new about the second youngest Senator, 34-year-old Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts.

Stories about noted Senator Lodge's grandson, who was once in the Washington bureau of the New York Herald Tribune, have filled countless newspaper columns ever since this astute young man gave up journalism for politics. But there is one thing about him that has not been told yet in print. It has to do with his fondness for flags. It is evidenced by the two, huge gold-fringed flags that tilt toward each other in his office on Capitol Hill.

One is the Stars and Stripes; the other is the white and blue banner of Massachusetts. Both are silk and sumptuous looking. Standing on round bases in opposite corners of one end of the Senator's office, they virtually dwarf the other furnishings in the room. Which, in their owner's opinion, is exactly what they should do.

Two Flags Are Symbol.

He loves those two flags. He didn't say so; but you could tell by the way he talked about them that it didn't much matter what else was in the room so long as they were there. "They symbolize the two reasons that I'm here," he said. "They are a constant reminder of the duty I must fulfill."

He has something else in his office you probably won't find in any other Senator's—a framed statement certifying that he won the latest election in Massachusetts signed by the man he defeated, Gov. James Michael Curley. The certificate has a place of honor on the mantel in his office, and visitors who comment on the flags frequently have their attention called also to this prize possession.

Although he is boyish looking, Lodge is no beginner in politics. He served two terms in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, where his grandfather began his distinguished career. It was on his grandfather's advice that he passed up law for journalism soon after he came out of Harvard as an honor graduate. He began his newspaper work on the Boston Transcript; then went to the New York Herald Tribune.

Father Was Poet.

His father was George Cabot Lodge, poet and essayist. He died when the boy was seven; from then on, young Henry Cabot looked to his grandfather for guidance. Called himself "Junior" instead of "Second," because his grandfather wanted it that way.

He is a fluent speaker and has two books on government to his credit. He is also a "family man"; has been married for ten years and has two sons, Henry Sears Lodge and George Cabot Lodge.

As in the case of other jobs he has tackled, he is taking seriously even minor duties connected with this one. Hasn't missed a roll call in the Senate. Doesn't expect to. In his spare time, which is fast becoming a minus quantity, he likes to fish, ride or play golf.

Pope's Rebuke Of Nazis Stirs Church Breach champion your rights before the leaders of your people, irrespective of temporary success or failure, and, obedient only to our conscience and our duties as shepherd, we shall continue to oppose an attitude that seeks to stifle guaranteed rights by open or covert show of force."

The most striking feature of the second part, which dealt with matters of Catholic faith, was the sharp issue it took with the assertion of Nazism that it is "Gottglaeubig," or believing in God. The message said:

"He is not Gottglaeubig who merely knows how to use that word oratorically. Whoever raises the concepts of race, or people for the state, or the form of government beyond mundane evaluations and makes heathenism ideals of them falsifies the divine order of things."

The letter asserted that the elections for abandoning the parochial schools in Germany were not fair because they were not secret and asserted that the Catholic Church will never willingly agree to schools in which teachers of religion are not free and in which the spirit of teaching in other branches is anti-Christian.

Hopes for Real Peace.

The Pope's message concluded with these solemn words:

"God is our witness that we have no more earnest wish than the re-establishment of real peace between the state and church in Germany.

"If, however, through no fault of ours, peace is not to come, then the church of God will defend its rights and liberties in the name of the All Highest, whose arm even today has not been shortened."

Secular Schools Favored.

Saarbruechek, Germany, March 21 (AP).—Voting by parents in Saar Province, whether to send their children to Nazi "secular schools on a Christian basis" or to confessional church schools, gave the secular schools an overwhelming victory in official returns announced today.

time of the blaze. The proprietor rushed downstairs and was greeted by a stream of water from fire hoses.

Sunday traffic was paralyzed shortly after 3 p. m. when three alarms were turned in for a blaze which swept through a wooden file room at the Rosslyn Steel & Cement Co., at Thirty-first and K streets northwest.

Flame Spread Feared.

The flames were quickly extinguished by the first firemen to reach the scene. The other alarms were turned in as a precaution had the flames spread to a lumber yard adjoining the plant.

Two valuable tapestries were destroyed and a little Easter bunny was nearly frightened to death in a fire at 1322 Massachusetts avenue northwest, thought to have originated from a kitchen stove. The home is owned by Mrs. William J. Flood, who said the tapestries and other damage probably would amount to about $3,000.

George A. Ford, 47, 478 F street southwest, was burned on the right hand while trying to extinguish a blaze which broke out in a bed mattress at his home. The fire did slight damage, and Ford was treated at Providence Hospital and released.

Value of TVA Dams in Flood Curb Doubted

Kellogg Says 'Main Stream Dikes May Accentuate High Waters.'

Controversy as to effectiveness of TVA dams on the Tennessee River in prevention of floods in that river's basin last year continued yesterday when C. W. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute, said in a prepared statement that "in a serious flood on the river, such as the record floods of the past, these power dams on the main stream might have accentuated flood conditions."

Kellogg's statement followed a Senate speech Friday by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, in which he denounced assertions that the TVA dams had not contributed materially to lessening flood dangers.

In his statement yesterday, Kellogg said, in part:

"The two dams completed to date by TVA are Wheeler dam and Norris dam. The first of these is a run-of-river dam and therefore can have no appreciable effect in flood control. The Norris dam (on the Clinch River, a tributary of the Tennessee) can serve to a limited extent to control floods but only if used properly for that purpose and not for production of firm power.

"The record of water levels behind Norris dam shows that from January 4 to 21, 1937, when, if it was expected the dam could be used to control floods, water should have been withdrawn from it, the reverse was the case and between those dates about 575,000 acre-feet of water was stored behind the dam, filling up that much space that might have been available if required to hold back water during the critical period which then followed. Of course, if the dam had been empty, it would not produce power. The result of this was that in the period from January 21 to February 1 when storage space at Norris was needed, only about 425,000 acre-feet was stored.

"The Associated Press reported Wheeler dam full on January 25 and Wilson dam to have an additional storage capacity at that time of only 50,000 acre-feet.

"The entire amount of water stored by TVA during the critical period affecting the crest of the Ohio River flood was thus about 475,000 acre-feet. On the basis of flood flow formulae for the Mississippi River and its tributaries, the utmost effect of this which it could have had would be to reduce the crest at Cairo only one to two inches. * * *"

Embassy Building Survey Is Started

By the Associated Press.

The Foreign Service Building Commission disclosed yesterday it had started a survey to determine where new American embassies, legations and consulates should be constructed in foreign cities.

With a $10,000,000 fund already allocated, the commission is contemplating a request for an additional $5,000,000 and authorization for new buildings in several countries.

The State Department now has under construction or planned new legations in Finland, Nicaragua, Haiti, Panama, Uruguay, Liberia and the Dominican Republic, and a consulate general and federal building in Shanghai.

Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State, said one of the major construction projects was the reconditioning, which would amount to practically new construction, of an embassy building purchased some years ago in Berlin, and similar work on the legation in Prague.

Constitution Amending Defended by Law Dean

The amending clause of the Constitution was described as the most important part of that document in an article by Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School, in an article appearing in the latest issue of the Trident, United States Naval Academy publication.

"Unless a constitution corresponds with real conditions," he wrote, "the peaceable evolution of a nation may be endangered, or, at the very least, progress may be blocked. A constitution must provide an adequate measure of stability, yet it must not be a straitjacket. Wodrow Wilson remarked that a constitution should not be like a contract, but a vehicle of life which changes with the changing life of the nation. To make this possible is the function of the amending clause."

tracting. The reduction of stocks and industrial bank indebtedness has reached the limit and shows signs of reversing. Now that industry is operating at 1929 levels, the need for long-deferred replacements and new plants is becoming ever more urgent.

"The growing demand for capital has given rise to the fear that large amounts of employment and armament bills may soon be presented to the government for redemption. That the government is aware of this possibility is evident from the consolidation loans, which it has floated in the last few years. In 1934 and 1935 the Reich issued bonds totaling 3,670,000,000 marks, of which a large part was taken directly by savings banks and insurance companies. The Reich Railway Company also floated a loan of 500,000,000 in 1935. Another government bond issue of 500,000,000 was announced on February 23, 1937.

Hope for Higher Taxes.

"The Reich hopes to continue consolidating its short-term indebtedness as the market permits. It is probably banking on the large increase in tax receipts to meet most of its extraordinary fiscal needs. The authorities also hope that the accumulation of new capital which has been estimated at 2.35 to 2.55 billion marks for 1936 will expand rapidly enough to satisfy the requirements of the Four-Year Plan.

"With the completion of the rearmament program the government's own financial needs are likely to diminish. The government counts on its complete control of prices and wages to check any tendencies toward inflation. Nevertheless, it is apparent that the Reich must henceforth proceed more cautiously if it is not to overstrain its resources."

The campaign for self-sufficiency has exacted burdensome sacrifices" from the German people, the report finds. Elaborating on this statement, de Wilde said:

"The Nazi campaign for greater self-sufficiency has exacted burdensome sacrifices from the German people. To increase agricultural output, subventions have been granted to producers of hemp, flax and wool, and prices averaging twice as high as world market levels have been guaranteed for soya beans, rapeseed, linseed and other oil seeds of domestic origin. German consumers have had to bear a shortage of many foodstuffs and attendant high prices. Although accurate data are lacking, the cost of most synthetic industrial materials is far above that of the natural imported products and the quality is often inferior.

"The price of synthetic benzine is said to be 3½ times the cost of imported gasoline, and the price of buna at least 6 times as high as that of natural rubber. Cloth woven from a mixture of cotton and cell wool is reported to cost 30 to 40 per cent more than pure cotton cloth. While prices of many of these products may ultimately become 'competitive' just as those of artificial milk and synthetic nitrates, the German people must meanwhile shoulder the burden. Moreover, the manufacture of synthetic materials has required the investment of an enormous amount of capital at a time when capital resources are slim.

CourtPlan Foes Today to Offer Case to Senate

that announcement of his speech was made through Senator Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, Senate floor leader and advocate of the proposed changes.

Clarke will speak from San Diego, Calif., but he will be introduced from Miami by former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1920. Wallace will address a meeting in Richmond of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation, but his words will be carried over a national hook-up. He has said he will defend the court plan in this speech.

Four Southern State chief executives make addresses on the program Saturday night—Governors R. W. Leche of Louisiana, Bibb Graves of Alabama, E. D. Rivers of Georgia and Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina.

Moley Also to Speak.

Moley, Assistant Secretary of State under the first Roosevelt Administration, but more recently a critic of some Roosevelt policies, was scheduled to follow Wheeler on the stand, probably on Tuesday.

Members of the opposition said yesterday they might accept "virtually any Constitutional amendment, Mr. Roosevelt proposes," but could not agree to his present proposal. They said they would "take the stump in every doubtful State" in support of an amendment, if Mr. Roosevelt would agree to that procedure.

Speedy ratification of an amendment would be assured, they argued, if Congress would call special ratifying conventions in each State—a method provided in the Constitution but rarely used.

Willingness Stressed.

Although they emphasized their willingness to let the Administration write its own amendment, they suggested that all the New Deal's objectives could be attained through these two proposals already before Congress:

1. An amendment authorizing Congress to re-enact by a two-thirds vote any legislation invalidated by the Supreme Court.

2. An amendment requiring more than a bare majority of the court to concur in decisions declaring Federal laws unconstitutional.

Beard Also to Speak.

The champions of the reorganization program also will include Charles A. Beard, the hostorian, who will discuss historical aspects of the plan in a Nation-wide broadcast March 29, according to the Public Information Committee.

Eight days of hearings on the President's proposal have brought only one change in the Senate Judiciary Committee line-up, the United Press said. Senator William H. Deiterich (Democrat), Illinois, uncommitted at first, now is aligned with the Administration. He made his stand public at the close of Friday's hearing when he asked Chairman Henry Fountain Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, that the "generalissimo of the other side" be required to furnish the committee with the names of opposition witnesses so that he could prepare his questioning.

Dieterich's stand changed the committee lineup on Mr. Roosevelt's plan to seven in favor, seven against and four uncommitted. The committee now stands, the United Press said:

For, 7.—Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona; Neely (Democrat), West Virginia; Logan Democrat), Kentucky; Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois; Pittman (Democrat), Nevada; Hughes (Democrat), Delaware, and Norris (Independent), Nebraska.

Against, 7.—King (Democrat), Utah; Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana; Burke (Democrat), Nebraska; Connally (Democrat), Texas; Borah (Republican), Idaho; Austin (Republican), Vermont, and Steiwer (Republican), Oregon.

Uncommitted, 4. — McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; McGill (Democrat), Kansas; Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming.

The four uncommitted committee members norally follow the Administration. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, however, in his cross-exaination of witnesses, led Ashurst to include him among the opposition Senators in a casual reference. O'Mahoney objected immediately emphasizing he had not announced his position.

Roosevelt Plans Fall or Summer Philippine Trip

Warm Springs, Ga., March 21 (AP).—It was authoritatively reported here yesterday that President Roosevelt was considering a trip to the Philippines this fall or next summer.

The exact time for the long journey across the Pacific, which would match in distance the President's cruise to Buenos Aires last fall, was said to depend on the length of the Congressional session.

If Congress prolongs the current term, officials indicated Mr. Roosevelt would put off the Pacific journey until next spring or summer.

Word that the President was planning the trip circulated here after he had told newsmen he was enjoying his vacation at Warm Springs so much that he might extend it two days.

Lonely Nurse Tries Suicide In 35-Foot Leap

Hurt Seriously, English Girl Sobs to Go Back Home.

Lonely and homesick for her friends in England, Miss Rose Bridger, 16-year-old nursemaid, yesterday tucked two small children of her employer, Jean C. Baube, French journalist, in their cribs and leaped from a third-floor window of the Alban Towers Apartment, 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Clutching a knife in her hands, she plunged 35 feet to a concrete driveway in the rear of the apartments. Her left leg, hip and arm were fractured. It also is believed she suffered infernal injuries.

Baube, Washington correspondent for Havas, French news agency, hastened to Emergency Hospital when he learned of the girl's injuries and underwent a blood transfusion in an effort to save her life.

At about 12:30 p. m.—the hour of the girl's leap—Seventh Precinct police received a telephone call from a woman who said there was trouble in the Baubes' apartment. Receiving no response to repeated knocks, policemen forced open the door. They found only the children, a boy, 18 months, and his 3-year-old sister, asleep in their cribs. At the same time crowds were gathering around the girl's crumpled form in the driveway.

Torn remnants of a note, written in Spanish, were found in the apartment. Detectives called upon the State Department to decipher the note.

Dr. Joseph S. Loughran, pastor of the Cleveland Park Community Church, was lunching with friends in Alban Towers and he went to Emergency Hospital to volunteer for a blood transfusion. When his blood did not match, he remained by the girl's bedside comforting her.

"I want to go back to England," sobbed the girl to Dr. Loughran. "All my friends are there. I can't make any friends over here."

Precinct Detective H. H. Carper said Miss Bridger told him she came to America about two years ago with Mr. and Mrs. Baube.

Assault on Girl Laid to Gunman Who Slew Woman

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—A slim gunman with a Halloween mask, sought for killing Mrs. Mary Irwin, was hunted by police today for the criminal assault on Miss Anna Weiner, 20, daughter of Rabbi Isaac Weiner.

Miss Weiner was attacked and her escort, Harold Shapiro, 21, robbed of $5 and his automobile early today.

Miss Weiner told police she and Shapiro had stopped in the car en route home from a party. The man walked out of the shadows, threatened them with a revolver, robbed Shapiro and forced him from the machine. The robber then drove away with Miss Weiner, attacked her and forced her from the car.

From a description furnished by the victims, police said they believed the stranger was the man who killed Mrs. Irwin, wife of a policeman, during an attempted holdup March 11.

Rail Inspection System Announced by Russia

Moscow, March 21 (AP).—The Soviet government has decided to establish an elaborate system of inspection on its railway system to stamp out sabotage and enforce safety measures, Lazarus M. Kaganovitch, commissar of railways, announced yesterday.

Continuation of sabotage operations such as were described in the January trial of 17 men on charges of treason was one reason for the decision, reached at the recent session of the central executive committee of the Communist Party, Kaganovitch said.

Osgood, the Duck, Spends Life Harassing Pigeons, Motorists

Osgood in action along Dupont Circle way.

Although Playful, He Is a Gentleman and the Bon Vivant of Dupont Circle; Once Paid Visit to Fashionable Sulgrave Club.

By Scott Hart.

Osgood, the duck, has an emerald head that shows flecks of golden feathers when viewed at proper angles in the sunlight. He has a brown, fat and speckled back, and the manners, mind you, for it's important, of a gentleman at his ease.

The automobiles that breeze along Dupont Circle have long, sleek bodies, for the most part, impatient motors and occupants who don't want any monkey business—any duck business, either.

Osgood was exceptionally busy yesterday, because it was the first day of spring and there were many automobiles about, and it was fun to quack into the teeth of their horns and make them be polite, as the picture of Osgood shows.

Slated for Table But—

Now Osgood is owned by T. F. Henson, a florist of Dupont Circle. Once he had a notion of eating Osgood, but that was a long while ago and has no bearing at all on the manners of Osgood or the sleek and long-bodied cars, the impatience of the cars' occupants or the reason why Osgood wants to cross a busy thoroughfare.

Osgood wants to cross the thoroughfare to play with the pigeons on the other side of the street. Osgood has a curious sense of the proprieties of play—he thinks it's swell to waddle on his webbed and splayed feet to the other side of the street, then, of a quacking sudden, to pounce from behind a convenient tree, light pole or mail box into a group of pigeons pecking away at their dinners.

The pigeons make a throaty sound and fly away; Osgood sends up a couple of quacks, flaps his short speckled wings, preens the emerald that tops his head and crosses the street again.

It's not the playfulness of Osgood that is his claim to fame in Dupont Circle. It's the casual manner of Osgood. Life, to Osgood, is an easy chair with a foot rest. It's a big quiet millpond with a lot of bullrushes to swim among. And this gentleman-at-his-ease air of Osgood thaws the impatience of the cars' occupants at the intersection of Dupont Circle.

Eternal Wonderer.

Apparently an eternal wonderer about what's all the people for and what's all the hurry for, Osgood, neither waiting on nor caring about the traffic light indications, steps off the curb with the light step of an old lady on a rainy day. Soon, the advanced cars in the street stop, then all stop. Head high and with an occasional "quack" that Osgood obviously thinks is clearing the path, he struts to the opposite curb, there to confound a gang of pigeons.

Henson bought him one Halloween. The idea was to place him in his yard to set off a display of pumpkins, cornstalks and other Holloween color. Osgood's color scheme fitted into the Halloween color scheme and also into the more general color scheme of the florist's shop. Henson decided against eating him; considered him too good a pet, easily worth the 85 cents he cost.

Only once has Osgood caused his owner any pain. But then a poignant pain when, looking from a window one evening, he saw Osgood, a gentleman, in an obvious attempt to crash the Sulgrave Club during the height of a fashionable party.

Counterfeit Suspect Held.

D. C. Resident Replies to Rider Talk of Blanton

Secretary Wender, of Citizens' Group, Shows Terms Changed.

Marked differences between the 1935 anticommunism proposals of the Federation of Citizens Associations and the red rider which Congress subsequently passed, were emphasized yesterday by Harry S. Wender, secretary of the Southwest Citizens Association, answering a recent radio talk by former Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas.

The federation, which in recent weeks voted for red rider repeal, never did contemplate permanent legislation that would deny salaries to any person "teaching or advoc.ing" communism, Wender contended in his argument with the Texan, who is credited with fathering the rider.

Furthermore, Jesse C. Suter, former federation president, whom Blanton recently charged with "preparing and offering" the original anticommunism proposal, did not act in that capacity, according to Wender.

The proposal, offered at the March 16, 1935, meeting of the federation, was first made by James G. Yaden, and Suter then offered an amendment because he was not sympathetic to Yaden's resolution, the Southwest association secretary declared.

"Judge Blanton knows, as does anyone else even slightly familiar with parliamentary procedure, that one who moves to amend a proposal on the floor is always an opponent of the proposal as made, or he wouldn't attempt to amend it," Wender said. "In many cases he is opposed to the entire proposition, but realizing his inability to prevent approval of the measure, endeavors to change the phraseology so as to render it less objectionable.

"There were a few of us in the federation that night who vigorously opposed Mr. Yaden's resolution. But when it became apparent that we were in the minority, we attempted to temper the language of the original resolution and were successful in obtaining Mr. Yaden's consent to the amendment."

Yaden's original proposal, Wender said, indorsed "the efforts of the Board of Education and the superintendent of schools to have the appropriation for character education restored to the District of Columbia appropriation bill on condition only that no one who at any time during the past five years shall have been connected in any way with the colleges, schools or universities of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics shall be paid any money or moneys from said appropriations for the public schools of the District of Columbia."

After an "exceptionally heated debate this hurried amendment was offered by Mr. Suter," Wender declared yesterday:

"Be it further resolved that the federaion urge upon Congress the insertion in the District of Columbia appropriation bill of a provision that no money herein appropriated for the public schools shall be paid to an advocate of communism, or other un-American doctrines or to (anyone in any way connected with) any organization or agency advocating such doctrine."

This federation proposal as amended was something far different, Wender submitted in his radio talk, from the red rider, which says:

"That hereafter no part of any appropriatoin for the public schools shall be available for the payment of the salary of any person teaching or advocating communism."

3 Boys Seized, Admit Thefts Of Two Purses

Three New Robberies Reported; Cab Driver Held Up 7th Time.

Three youths were charged with robbery yesterday after alleged confessions to snatching two pocketbooks last week. They will be arraigned in Police Court this morning.

Arrested by members of the robbery squad, the boys gave their names as George W. Andre, 17, of the 1300 block K street southeast; Joseph W. Pietro, 18, of the 300 block Ninth street southeast, and William W. Scott, 17, of the 700 block G street southeast. Pietro's brother is a well-known boxer with the Police Boys Club team.

According to detectives, the youths snatched a pocketbook belonging to Mary B. Yates, 1423 Webster street northwest, March 16, near her home. The purse contained about $4, she said.

The other theft of which the boys are accused occurred March 15 when Betty Brinker, 4726 Third street northwest, lost $18 to three youths at Ninth and Nicholson streets northwest.

Three robberies were reported to police yesterday.

Ernest Morningstar, 28, 435 Sixteenth street southeast, a cab driver, was robbed of $11.40 by a passenger who threatened him with a revolver at Third and G streets northwest. The bandit forced Morningstar to walk into an alley. The cab driver has been held up six times previously.

"At least seven" men attacked Charlie Hawkins, colored, 1230 Half street southeast, at First and M streets southeast, and robbed him of $2.

About $2 was taken by two men who appeared at their apartment at 1706 M street northwest, John Bromwell and Herbert Thiele, roommates, told police. The intruders assaulted them, took the money and fled on foot, the victims declared.

Sentence was deferred eight weeks "to see how he conducts himself."

Anti-Reds Plan World Congress

Berlin, March 21 (AP).—An anti-Communist world congress to be held in the near future was announced today by Nils von Bahr, Swedish army reserve officer, who is secretary of a group representing 20 nationalities.

Forty-four delegates of the group, meeting secretly at Feldafing, Bavaria, last autumn, decided to oppose the Communist International with a military international organization.

Union Mapping Plan to Defend 8 Auto Plants

Plans to Call 150,000 Men to Fight Eviction at Detroit.

Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, and some informed sources said a meeting between John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the Chrysler board, still was regarded as an eventual step toward settling the dispute.

Shortly after Chrysler strikers sent word Saturday to Murphy that use of State troops to force them out of the plants would "lead to bloodshed and violence," the corporation's president, K. T. Keller, charged that "lawless elements" were in control of its factories.

Keller, in a statement to employes, indicated the company would not give in to the union's demand for sole collective bargaining rights for the 87,000 Chrysler employes.

In two other automotive strikes, developments were expected this week. At Lansing, union leaders and officials of the Reo Motor Car Co. have agreed to meet tomorrow. Negotiations were at a standstill in the strike of 20,000 Hudson Motor Car Co. employes.

Strikers Attend Church.

New York, March 21 (AP).—Taking advantage of a week-end truce agreed on yesterday by union leaders and officials of the H. L. Green Co., striking employes in four of the company's 5, 10 and 25 cent stores today interrupted their sit-down strike long enough to attend church.

Most of the employes had been in the stores continuously since the strikes started more than a week ago. They went to church in cabs supplied by the union and immediately after the services returned to their sit-downs.

Store Strike Voted.

Providence, R. I., March 21 (AP).—Joseph Sylvia, Rhode Island chairman for the Committee of Industrial Organization, today announced representatives of department store workers had voted to call "a city-wide strike with the exception of food and drug stores" tomorrow.

Sylvia's announcement came after between 300 and 400 workers discussed plans for a conference with Gov. Robert E. Quinn and heads of 11 stores who yesterday closed their shops filled with Easter purchasers, in an effort, managements said, to forestall a strike.

Five thousand were estimated unofficially as affected by yesterday's shut-down. Observers said the strike call would affect thousands more.

J. Howard McGrath, United States attorney and general counsel for the store owners, said yesterday the workers sought "a straight 10 per cent wage increase" and C. I. O. recognition.

Bethlehem to Negotiate.

New York, March 21 (AP).—The Bethlehem Steel Corporation said today in a statement of policy on collective bargaining that it was willing to bargain in individual plants with any groups for the employes they represent.

The statement said the corporation had been practicing collective bargaining in its plants for 20 years and that negotiations are now going on in some of the 23 plants with labor groups, including the steel workers' organizing committee, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Coughlin Assails Lawmakers.

Detroit, March 21 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin asserted today the fundamental cause of automobile strikes in Michigan is that the State Legislature has been "negligent" in not passing minimum wage and maximum hour laws.

He termed the Chrysler strike a "civic broil with the law of the State, as it stants at the moment, on the side of the industrialist and the sympathy of the citizens of the State and of the Nation on the side of the laborer."

Edwin S. Stuart, Former Pa. Governor, Is Dead

Philadelphia, March 21 (AP).—Edwin S. Stuart, former Governor of Pennsylvania and former Mayor of Philadelphia, died today at his home in suburban Overbrook. He was 83.

Stuart, Governor from 1907 to 1911, was a native of Philadelphia. He first entered public life as a member of Philadelphia's old select council, to which he was elected in 1886. He served as a councilman until 1891, when he was named mayor.

Upon retiring from the governorship, Stuart remained out of public office.

Flaming Oil Rages In Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City, March 26 (AP).—Flaming oil raged for three hours in a huge underground storm sewer in a mile square of East Side Oklahoma City last night before firemen brought the blaze under control.

As the flames broke out with a roar in a series of six explosions, firemen and police rushed into the residential district, roped off the streets and kept all persons out. Citizens ran from their homes.

Fire Chief George Ross said a storage tank at the No. 1 Harper Turner oil well of the Griesson Oil Co. overflowed. Crude oil poured down into the storm sewer, 20 feet in diameter, and became ignited in some manner, he said.

Mussolini Completes North African Tour

Tripoli, Libya, March 21 (AP).—Premier Mussolini ended a nine-day tour of Italy's North African domains yesterday when he sailed for Italy aboard the cruiser Pola.

(In the course of his tour, Il Duce's first African visit in ten years, he dedicated the new 1,250-mile coastal road and other Italian works, made several speeches and visited the principal centers of Italian administration under the guidance of Gen. Italo Balbo, governor of Libya.)

His departure is understood to have been hastened by bad weather.

Motive Hunted In Suicide Leap From Airplane

San Francisco Man Opens Ship's Emergency Door; Body Not Found.

upset last Friday, but that his health was good.

Stewardess Myrta Sawdy reported to Burbank police when the plane finished its run that Maren had been drinking.

"When I served coffee, he asked me if there was any chance to get some whisky," the stewardess told police. "I told him that whisky and airplanes did not mix. He asked me about a door near his seat and what it was for. I told him it was the emergency door and that to open it one must break the glass encasing the handle. Later, I felt a rush of air, and going to the passenger's seat, I found it empty."

Maren's Brown overcoat and an empty pint whisky bottle were found in his seat. The only other passenger on the plane, Epsey Julien, San Francisco engineer, was asleep when Maren disappeared.

Cecil Meadows, Kern airport superintendent, made an aerial search for the body today, but said it might never be found because of the nature of the terrain.

United Airplanes officials here said that to their knowledge Maren's suicide leap was the first on any American commercial line.

Maren was a Works Progress Administration worker on a leave of absence. He was a naturalized Russian and was unmarried. His parents live in China and two brothers live in San Francisco.

Ex-Illinois Professor Kidnaped, Friend Fears

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—Fear for the safety of Joseph Retz Ramser, 35, former economics professor at the University of Illinois, was expressed by his friends yesterday, one of whom, John D. Banning, said he would ask Federal aid in the belief he might have been kidnaped. Ramser disappeared four days ago after escorting a young woman to a suburban railroad station. His wallet was found on the shore of Lake Michigan near his home.

Preoccupied Drivers Menace To Safety of Others in Traffic

backing from a side street into the line of traffic. Other cars were forced to swerve to prevent an accident. The driver told Patton:

"I'll admit I'm wrong, officer, please forgive me. I'll never do it again. I wasn't thinking. I never argue when I'm wrong."

Others will admit the policeman is "probably right—but I won't have a chance, anyhow."

They apparently don't realize that it means no glory for Patton to make an arrest. He receives no marks of merit for a large number of "cases."

Said Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, when the safety drive was inaugurated:

"All we want is co-operation from the public. My men are not out there to harrass motorists. They are there for the sole purpose of saving lives and regulating traffic."

Children, the patrol has discovered, contribute much to highway dangers. Often they are found playing in the streets or heedlessly crossing in the middle of blocks.

Schools Have Program.

District schools have a definite safety program. Children are warned against highway dangers and instructed in safe walking practices. School boy patrols guard all intersections near schools and are trained to safeguard their little charges.

And for many months, District authorities have appealed to parents for co-operation in efforts to save young lives. Safety programs in the home have been urged. To a great extent, parents have wholeheartedly supported the movement. But many children—and the little girl was an example—receive no safety instruction in the home.

A large percentage of traffic fatalities last year were children. Nearly every community in the city has a playground. Parents have been urged to see that their children play at these centers rather than on the streets. Motorists, as well as the youngsters themselves, will enjoy greater safety if this practice is followed, officials point out.

And during daily tours, the safety patrol has noted numerous instances of carelessness on the part of bicycle riders—young and old.

Apply to Bicycles.

District traffic laws apply to bicycles as well as automobiles. Rarely, however, has a bicycle rider been seen to stop for a red traffic signal or "stop" sign. National Safety Council figures show that last year a total of 770 bicycle riders were killed and 24,200 were injured in various sections of the country.

The patrol noted eight bicycle riders who ignored safety rules. In one case, the rider narrowly escaped injury when he ran into the side of an auto, which was traveling on a green light.

"I guess I just wasn't looking," responded the sheepish youth to questions from Policeman Patton.

Another traffic story will appear tomorrow. Safe and sane driving will keep you from Traffic Court and your name from these stories. Think of "the other fellow."

Crop Harvest Rises.

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Reclamation estimated yesterday the average value of crops harvested on reclamation projects last year was $48.20 per acre, as compared with $39.65 in 1935.

Jewish Center Holds Service For Children

500 Are Introduced to Ceremonies Connected With Passover.

Five hundred Washington Jewish boys and girls were introduced to ceremonies connected with the celebration of Passover yesterday morning in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

Services, conducted by Mrs. Philip Diatz, president of the Hebrew Parent-Teacher Association, were modeled after those the youngsters' parents and older brothers and sisters will attend during the regular Passover period, which begins next Friday.

The children were taught the significance of the ... of unleavened bread and of the ceremonial wine, as well as other features of the Jewish observance, which commemorates the deliverance of the ancient Jews from the land of bondage.

The Center Jewish Educational Department and the Adas Israel School sponsored the services.

Mrs. Peyton, 84, Dies at Home In Alexandria

Had Resided There Since Childhood; Was Mother of Mrs. Shepperson.

Mrs. Maria Champe Carter Pauli Peyton, who was believed to be the last surviving Alexandrian to leave the city when it was invaded by Union soldiers at the outbreak of the Civil War, died at 3 p. m. yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, at 907 Prince street, Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Peyton was the widow of James Franklin Peyton. She was the daughter of the late William and Imogene Berry Pauli and was born at Culpeper on July 28, 1852. In Culpeper her father was associated with former Gov. William (Extra Billy) Smith in a stage coach line between Alexandria and Orange. Mrs. Peyton came to Alexandria when she was 4, her father having sold out his holdings in the stage coach business and invested in the newly organized Orange & Alexandria Railway.

At the outbreak of the War Between the States, Mrs. Peyton's father sent his wife and daughter away from the city. He had been the conductor on the train that carried troops to Harpers Ferry to quell the John Brown insurrection and the Union troops sought him out for punishment when they reached the city.

Mrs. Peyton and her mother went first to Charlottesville and then to Lynchburg, where Mr. Peyton joined them and they lived for the duration of the war. The war over, they returned to Alexandria.

Mrs. Peyton had many memories of early Alexandria. She remembered when the town watchman on the main corner came out of his "box" and called the hours, and when the waterman, with his cart, sold drinking water to residents who lived too far from the town's pumps to send their servants.

Mrs. Peyton's eldest son, the late James T. Peyton, jr., was for more than 25 years the Alexandria representative of The Washington Post. She is survived by the one daughter, Mrs. Shepperson, with whom she made her home, and three grandchildren, Charles M. Shepperson 3d, of Pikesville, Md.; Mrs. C. Booker Powell, of Washington, and Miss Imogene B. Shepperson, of Alexandria.

Soviet May Close Manchu Rail Link

Tokyo, March 21 (AP).—The newspaper Nichi Nichi in a dispatch from Hsinking, Manchukuo, yesterday reported that Soviet Russia intends to suspend all rail traffic between Siberia and Manchuria.

If this proves true it probably will suspend entirely one of the main highways of world travel, the trans-Siberian rail route between Europe and the Far East.

The Soviet Railway Administration already has severed connections between its Ussuri Railway—between Vladivostok and Habarovsk—and the eastern part of the North Manchuria Railway, formerly the Chinese Eastern Railway, but now operated by Japan's South Manchuria Railway as part of the Manchukuo national system.

Army Men Praise Amelia Earhart's Nerve in Crack-up

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Honolulu, March 21.—Army fliers praised the cool nerve of Amelia Earhart today for averting possible tragedy in the rackup of her $80,000 "laboratory plane" and said the real cause of the accident which spoiled her world flight plans might never be known.

"I've seen and participated in many crashes," said Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount, of the Army Air Force, who witnessed the breath-taking smashup, "but I never saw anybody come out of one so cooly as she."

Aboard the liner Malolo bound for Los Angeles, Miss Earhart and her colleagues planned another attempt to fly around the world, but the details depended upon the repairing of the plane, which was ordered back to the factory in Los Angeles.

The Pan-American clipper, blazing a new air trail to Australia, was tuned up for a possible takeoff tomorrow for Kingman Reef, 1,067 miles south of here.

Watchman Found Beaten to Death

Brookneal, Va., March 21 (AP).—Joe E. Anderson, 53, night watchman at the Burrus Land & Lumber Co., here, was stabbed and beaten to death in the boiler room of the plant early today.

Deputy Sheriff P. W. Phillips, of Campbell County, said tonight he had taken Mrs. Mattie S. Anderson, widow of the night watchman, and Brack O'Donnell, married and the father of two children, to the Rustburg Jail for questioning.

Scotland Yard Denies George VI Plot Inquiry

London, March 21 (AP).—A spokesman for Scotland Yard today asserted that famous police headquarters knew nothing about reports it was investigating a suspected plot against the life of King George VI.

The newspaper Sunday Referee reported such an investigation in progress. It said detectives had raided the room of an unknown man and found a throwing knife wrapped up in a map of the route of the coronation procesion.

The Symphony Drive.

In the midst of "annotating" by loudspeaker the program which the National Symphony Orchestra gave in combination with Paul Whiteman's Band last week, Deems Taylor took time out to boost the drive to raise a sustaining fund for the Washington musicians. Four years ago, he said, when he first heard the National Symphony, he found it playing far better than any orchestra of two years' standing had any right to play. Today, he continued, the National Symphony is playing better than any orchestra has any right to play.

This was plainly hyperbole. The sober fact is that the National Symphony is kept by too few rehearsals from the complete success it could otherwise achieve. To make more rehearsals possible is a principal point in asking the City of Washington to contribute $110,000, or about 20 cents per capita, for its maintenance. To date, however, only $64,000 has been forthcoming. This is a trifle less than the total amount raised last year. Refusing to admit that the orchestra's claim on the community has lessened during the past season, the campaign committee has determined to extend its drive another week.

The decision is sensible. Recent appeals for flood relief and other contributions have put the orchestra solicitors at a disadvantage this year. But a still greater handicap has been the coincidence of their visits with those of the income tax collectors. This was the case last year also. The Symphony Association might be well advised next year to select dates for its campaign somewhat removed from spectral March 15. The strength of the orchestra's appeal under adverse circumstances indicates what might be expected if the time of the drive were better chosen.

Amelia's Flight.

Amelia's crashed again. And, though all are thankful that her extraordinary luck held good and no one was injured, many are wearing smug smiles at the news.

The people, for example, who distrust all aviation have an I-told-you-so look on their faces. In this they are joined by the few who accept flying as feasible but who feel woman's place is in the kitchen, not the cockpit. But in addition to these, many more are inwardly satisfied to see the round-the-world attempt ended. They have been skeptical of its true worth. Miss Earhart's $80,000 plane, it is known, was provided by the research foundation of Purdue University, with which she is associated. And it was equipped with many new safety devices which she was hoping to test. Moreover, she was certain to contribute some new information to the aviator's book of knowledge by the mere fact that she would have been the first to fly several of her projected hops.

But, despite all, the flight must have been principally an adventure. The fact that, following her accident in Honolulu, Miss Earhart immediately abandoned ideas of attempting the route again and instead began discussing plans to break Wiley Post's round-the-world record, tends only to confirm this thought. Adventure in its place has an everlasting appeal, but it should be carefully distinguished from both scientific research and commercial enterprise. Flying has become an important part of our modern transportation system. As such, it has nothing to gain from adventurous exploits, even when they are confined to fields where pioneering remains to be done. For the hazards of such expeditions are seldom dissociated in the public mind from the service of commercial aviation.

Welcome Easter Present.

Eighty-five cents on the dollar is probably much more than the shareholders in the Fidelity Building and Loan Association ever expected to salvage from the closed institution. For this welcome Easter present, they can thank the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Through its offices a new association will be formed which will take over the assets of the closed bank, giving stockholders the privilege of redeeming their shares at a 15 per cent discount.

This favorable settlement may raise a question in the minds of some investors as to why the association was ever closed. It should be remembered, however, that values have risen considerably since July when the association was shut down. No doubt the outlook was much darker at the time when the Comptroller General stepped in to lock its doors. Moreover, the fact that an officer of the association was then suspected of, and is now standing trial for, misuse of funds was a powerful influence in the closing, regardless of the association's strength.

In effect, an institution closed by one Government agency—the Treasury Department—will be reopened, if the court approves, by another—the FHLB. Yet this is not futility. The Treasury by its action has served warning to all building and loan associations within its jurisdiction that regulations will be strictly enforced. In a business where speculation is too often practiced, this is welcome knowledge for the investing public.

As for the action of the FHLB, it demonstrates that the home loan banking system, serving the important building industry, can and does render a valuable public service.

The President's Silence.

It is surprising that President Roosevelt, with his proper concern for the many grave problems which confront the Nation, has as yet found no occasion to express himself publicly on the subject of sit-down strikes.

The crisis in Detroit, where a great city is rapidly drifting into a condition not far removed from anarchy, is only an extreme aspect of a situation found in many parts of the Nation and likely to become more prevalent. Nothing succeeds like success. The simplicity and undoubted efficiency of the sit-down technique will encourage its utilization, in factories, stores and offices, until the issue is clearly and squarely confronted. The responsibility of the President to do this is as unequivocal as it is vital. But Mr. Roosevelt has so far preferred to keep silent.

Of course a phenomenon of this sort does not sweep the Nation unless conditions are ripe for it. The development of orderly trade unionism has long been impeded by a reactionary attitude which has not hesitated to spend millions of dollars in fighting, by fair means and foul, the development of a perfectly normal and, on the whole, desirable trend.

Like a dam this resistance has backed up powerful social forces, and it is natural that their inevitable release should mean a certain amount of turbulence. But the potential damage in the present outburst cannot be calmly tolerated merely because the fact of the outburst is easily explicable. And silence by the President on this issue implies a consent which before this he should have found occasion to deny.

There is another factor, moreover, which apologists for the sit-down strike cannot afford to overlook. Whether or not the procedure is in some instances morally justifiable, it has been tested for legality in the courts and in that vital respect found wanting. To tolerate an illegal practice is to bring all government which rests on law into contempt. It is an incitement to interested groups to take the action which is incumbent upon, but evaded by, responsible officials. Such incitement is clearly provided when the sit-down strikers in the Chrysler plants bluntly tell Gov. Murphy, after the courts have ordered their evacuation, that "We don't intend to leave these plants without a satisfactory settlement."

There is no government, there is only the dictation of brute force, when any group in the community defies the law and announces that it will continue defiance until a "settlement" which it regards as "satisfactory" is reached. For if such tactics are permissible in the case of one group, they are permissible for all. When the law is shattered its protection disappears for all parties. And if vigilantes decide they want to seize the headquarters from which sit-down strikes are sponsored, then that line of "settlement" also becomes "satisfactory."

That is the point which seems to have been overlooked by James M. Landis in his interesting address at a conference of law students here on Saturday night. The chairman of the S. E. C., who is soon to become dean of the Harvard Law School, pointed out that law gradually expands the sphere of human rights and suggested that under this evolutionary procedure legal sanction may sometime be given to the encroachment on property rights which today "finds itself with doubtful traditional legal justification."

Possibly this will turn out to be the case. But where the address of Mr. Landis, as reported, lacks conviction is in its failure to note that observation of existing law is basic to progress in future law. If the pillars of the arch are knocked down the keystone will never be fitted. And no government can hope to improve the quality of justice if it is unable to administer law now on the statute books. To say that one violation is extenuated by another, of course, is merely to confess a double weakness on the part of government.

There has never been, and never will be, a society in which order was secured in a day. Even the bare basis of social progress is achieved only through slow and painstaking effort, in which observance of the rules is of paramount importance. But there are many societies in which order has been destroyed almost overnight and the chance of future development thereby obliterated.

The sit-down strike is a serious matter because within it lies the seed of that destruction. It would be incredible if the President of the United States, above all others responsible for national security, should long hesitate to speak out on a matter of such fundamental importance.

Independence Above Defense.

There will be widespread regret that Congress must decide the most vital issue in American history concerning the Supreme Court with no word of advice from members of that tribunal. Nevertheless, the disinclination of the justices to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee can readily be understood. Even when the prestige of the court is at stake, they refuse to be drawn into a controversy over political policy.

Undoubtedly the court will supply the Senate committee with any information that may be requested in connection with the President's reorganization proposal. But the justices will not attempt to defend themselves against the Administration's attack, regardless of how unfair, misleading or malicious the charges may be. In taking this attitude they have manifested restraint that can be found in no other branch of the Government.

Ordinarily there would be no indiscretion in the appearance of Supreme Court justices before a Congressional committee. Their unwillingness to testify in this case appears to be due entirely to a desire to remain aloof from the controversy. If the court is to retain the full confidence of the people in its impartiality, it cannot take notice of moot issues before Congress. It cannot retaliate for demagogic charges and unfounded accusations, even though its own fate may hang in the balance. For it is first, last and always a judicial body whose sole function is to interpret the law without bias or favor.

One of the most disconcerting aspects of the current dispute is the fact that this constitutional responsibility imposed upon the court is so often ignored. For example, James Roosevelt, the President's son and administrative assistant, criticized the court in a political speech on Friday night for setting "itself aloof and apart from the will of the people." That, of course, is precisely the duty of any supreme tribunal. It has no obligation to follow election returns or to "co-operate" with the President beyond the honest adjudication of cases presented to it. On the contrary, every justice is bound by solemn oath to remain aloof from popular passions and to interpret the Constitution as it is written.

The Administration's judiciary bill is dangerous chiefly because it would penalize justices for taking this attitude. It would shift emphasis from independence to tractability on the bench. Justice Stone pointed out a few years ago that the unique position occupied by the court is not simply a result of the "great powers" conferred upon it by the Constitution. "It is due quite as much," he said, "to the position which it early assumed and has always maintained of independence from every external influence, and to thoroughness and fidelity in the performance of its judicial labors."

To make the Supreme Court subservient to the New Deal would strike at the very qualities that have made it a respected and dependable instrument of American government. Few opponents of this plan are specially concerned over the fate of the justices who happen to be sitting on the bench at present. But all of them are vitally concerned over the future of the court as an institution. And they may well be, for to taint the interpretation of law by deliberately injecting prejudice into the courts is to weaken the whole fabric of American government.

By refusing to testify in their own defense the so-called nine old men have significantly indicated that they, too, are more interested in preserving the independence of the judiciary, with all that implies, than in defending their own reputations against heedless attack.

The Old Tory.

In the current American vocabulary there is no stronger epithet than "reactionary." To follow the famous injunction, "When you say that, smile." But even when uttered in jest the person so accused is likely to wince. And the more respectable term, "conservative," has also acquired a distinctly deprecatory implication. For ours, we have been told so often that some really believe it, is a changing world. Therefore, the only individuals worthy of praise are those who uphold the gospel of change on the pleasing assumption that this necessarily means improvement.

But while mankind changes its ideas, its clothes, its amusements and its institutions, Nature, the old tory, moves persistently in her accustomed grooves. The stars in their courses, the seasons in their cycles, the inevitable sequence of birth, growth and decay—these go on and on according to seemingly immutable laws. Of course there is evolution, but to finite minds it is too slow to be perceptible.

All of which leads up to the report that the swallows of the San Juan Capistrano Mission in California have returned on schedule time to their nests there, and on the very day the legend says they always do. Such confirmation of purely empirical faith is interesting. Nobody knows just where the birds go from October to March, nor why they return. If we did, we might show a little more understanding of the forces which impel us.

Often it is the case that a man boasts he "can take it" when the fact is he hasn't sense enough to avoid it.

Street Cars In Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this so-called safety campaign, which is being conducted by The Post, I have not read anything about how the automobile traffic interferes with street cars. Automobiles race down between street car platforms and run over safety zones at their pleasure, but evidently that is not considered dangerous. The writer, just a few weeks ago, while standing in a safety zone, barely escaped being struck by a motorist who was passing other motor vehicles already two abreast.

While there is so much being said and written about traffic laws and the disregard of same, why not give a little consideration to the rights of electric transportation. The pedestrian even has a much better chance to move on and finally reach a destination than the street cars. The car tracks are usually so blocked with automobiles that the cars are stopped half way of the block instead of being permitted to move on to the stop. Then, when the light changes and the automobiles move on, the motorman has to stop the car to take on passengers.

Instead of "Watch Your Step and Live" as a slogan all the time, why not try "Watch Your Wheel and Let Live?" After many more campaigns that encourage the reckless drivers to become more reckless and the drunken drivers to feel sure that (if they have any influence at all) they will be exonerated if they run down and kill a person, one will hardly be safe on the sidewalks.

There are many safe, sane and sober drivers, and I know a number of them, but they also are at the mercy of the ones who have no regard for the rights of other people.

Temperance Call.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the time has arrived when we who espouse the dry cause, especially since we are so decidedly in the minority, should unite our forces, and put everything we have squarely back of a campaign for temperance.

As desirable as prohibition, if enforced, would be, the thinking dry must recognize proven evils of prohibition unenforced and running wild.

The control situation is constantly improving. To begin with, even such control as we now have has accomplished the longest step toward a solution of the problem, short of enforceable prohibition. It has eliminated the old-time saloon. This ancient institution was the festering sore of the liquor curse in the old days, because it was geared to serve the poorer and coarser element of humans.

In Washington, today, there are no saloons, for which we are duly thankful. The drinking places are so common that there is no congregating of men bent on drinking themselves to a stupor. In fact, there are no places where men congregate, as the most popular places are patronized by as many women as men. This insures an absence of the very elements which contribute to the undesirability of the saloon, and, of course, makes for more temperate drinking. Then, too, with nearly every restaurant serving spirits, there is no inclination to remain where they may be had, as they are at hand almost everywhere. The same thing is true of bottled spirits. Since they may be purchased at grocery stores, they will be purchased in smaller quantities, as they are consumed. The glamor of either drinking or purchasing bottled spirits has been taken away.

Let us get together and see if we cannot accomplish: The elimination of the silly, but perhaps effective advertising that spirits sharpen mental facilities, or have other beneficial effects on the human system; all advertising designed to create new alcohol demands, confining copy to the extolling of certain brands, for the attention of those who, having already determined their needs, must select what they want; the complete separation of politics from the liquor business; the discouraging of bars where there are no facilities for eating (other than cocktail rooms for the serving of both sexes); the constant improvement of quality of distilled liquors; the teaching of temperance to both young and old.

Since there are so few of us, I suggest, in getting the two factions together for a mutual consideration of these problems, that we include, in addition to the two dry factions, all citizens, wet or dry, who are willing to join us in a campaign for temperance.

I would like to hear from others, and if the sentiment warrants, I will arrange for an initial meeting. I have already had offered the use of one of the larger school auditoriums for the purpose.

Justice McReynolds' Words, Opinions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper quotes Justice McReynolds as saying that in his years on the bench he has tried to protect "the poorest darky in the Georgia backwoods as well as the man in the mansion on Fifth avenue." It is interesting to compare this statement with his record.

Justice McReynolds' concern for the Negro race received remarkable expression in his dissenting opinion in the case of Moore vs. Dempsey (1923). The case concerned five Arkansas Negroes railroaded to conviction for murder in order to save them from lynching. The leading citizens of the community had assured the lynching mob that the prisoners, if convicted, would be executed (implying of course that they would surely be convicted), and then made good their promise by calling colored witnesses and having them whipped and tortured until they could say what was wanted.

According to the decision of the Supreme Court, written by Justice Holmes, "the court and the neighborhood were thronged with an adverse crowd that threatened the most dangerous consequences to anyone interfering with the desired result. . . . The trial lasted about three-quarters of an hour and in less than five minutes the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. According to the allegations and affidavits there never was a chance for the petitioners to be acquitted; no juryman could have voted for an acquittal and continued to live in Phillips County and if any prisoner by any chance had been acquitted by a jury he could not have escaped the mob."

The circumstances in short were so shocking that the Supreme Court for the first time ventured to use the fourteenth amendment for the purpose for which it was originally intended, namely, to prevent miscarriages of justice against Negroes.

From this decision Justice McReynolds (joined by Justice Sutherland), dissented. "Under the disclosed circumstances," said Justice McReynolds, "I cannot agree that the solemn adjudications by courts of a great State, which this court has refused to review, can be successfully impeached by ex parte affidavits made upon the information and belief of ignorant convicts joined by two white men—confessedly atrocious criminals. The fact that petitioners are poor and ignorant and black naturally arouses sympathy, but that does not release us from enforcing principles which are essential to the orderly operation of our Federal system."

In the famous Scottsboro case—whose circumstances are too recent to require description—Justice McReynolds again dissented from the Supreme Court decision ordering a new trial. Justice McReynolds concurred with the dissenting opinion written by Justice Butler and concluding with these words: "The record wholly fails to reveal that petitioners have been deprived of any right guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, and I am of opinion that the judgment should be affirmed."

Only in the case of Brown vs. Mississippi, decided last year, did Justice McReynolds fail to dissent from a decision requiring a new trial for Negoes unjustly convicted. And the fact that that decision immediately followed the AAA decision leads many persons to believe that the conservative justices were specially concerned with making a record in defense of civil liberties in order to still the agitation provoked by their "tortured construction of the Constitution" in property rights cases.

BENJAMIN GINZBURG.

Washington, March 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No more convincing proof of the fallibility of higher court justices could be shown at this time than the alleged reference of Associate Justice McReynolds to the poor Negroes in the South. He was quoted as saying that he has tried to protect "the poorest darky in the Georgia backwoods as well as the man in the mansion on Fifth avenue."

The use of the term "darky" is as opprobrious to self-respecting colored citizens as the terms "dago," "sheeny," "wop," or "kike" are to other races. However innocently employed, the use of the word tends to show a subconscious mind-set which might militate against the rendering of an unprejudiced opinion in any case involving the constitutional rights of the Negro race.

One expects to see the word used in a sectional book like "Gone With the Wind," but newspapers, most periodicals, most radio announcers, and publishers of books to be used in American schools are careful to avoid giving offense.

Of course, Justice McReynolds meant no insult. Quite the contrary, but the venerable justice exploded the myth of a sacrosanct court when in public utterance he gave vent to a term that, used in some courts, would suffice to bring about a mistrial.

Yes, President Roosevelt's plan is good in many ways. Some less cloistered judges associating with those who have lived in the past might teach the old men more modern speech before a more sensitive public.

Approves Memorial Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Noting the constant and reiterated attacks upon the proposed memorial to Thomas Jefferson, I wonder if some of the opposition is not directed more against the memory of Jefferson himself than the type of memorial designed to perpetuate it. It has been 111 years since the immortal author of the Declaration of Independence, who twice served the Nation as its President, and added an empire to its domain, passed away; and during all that time no effective effort to erect a fitting moument to him has been made until the present. During that interim many men of lesser note have been honored with statues or other memorials.

This writer can scarcely conceive of a more beautiful design than that of John Russell Pope which it is proposed to follow. It is a type in which the soul of Jefferson would be delighted. Witness the rotunda at the University of Virginia, said to have been designed by him. Some say Jefferson believed in simplicity, which may be true, yet we well know that he built the stately mansion at Monticello for his own use and occupancy.

Abraham Lincoln was a man of simple tastes also, but they have erected to his memory a Greek temple which is universally admired for its commanding and harmonious proportions; and I have yet to hear any serious expression of regret that this memorial took the form it did.

On Child Labor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sob stuff about child labor, dragged in every time a New Deal speaker is seeking an extension of the mandate, should be dropped. It may, though, be natural to such a half-baked experimental proposition as the New Deal.

But it's not necessary to marry the New Deal or to concoct court pack schemes to handle this diminishing factor. To a "child laborer" on the farm from avid choice, like this writer, such guff becomes nauseating.

Experiments In Music

From the introduction, by Deems Taylor, to the program for the concert, by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra combined with the National Symphony Orchestra, held in Constitution Hall on March 17.

A GOOD many of us still remember going to the late lamented Aeolian Hall on Lincoln's birthday, 1924—the afternoon when Paul Whiteman, a dance band leader from the Palais Royal restaurant on Broadway, ventured to give a concert that he called "An experiment in modern music." His program contained jazz, ancient and modern, popular classics rearranged for his own heretical combination of instruments, and two or three pieces that he had commissioned for the occasion. One of these last was a thing called "A Rhapsody in Blue," by a young song-writer named Gershwin. You may have heard of it. There were head-waggings and beard-strokings, of course, among us members of the critical chain gang; but most of us had a grand time.

These "experiments" of Paul Whiteman's have been going on ever since. Their sponsor's purpose, in presenting them, is—and I venture to interpret him because I have known him for a long time—a very simple and honest one. He wants to offer a medium of expression—a market, aesthetically speaking—to composers who are writing in the so-called "jazz" idiom; a means of allowing them to say their musical say in somewhat more ambitious terms than those of a song hit or a foxtrot. What they say in such terms may be of no epoch-making importance. Which does not mean that it is not worth saying at all. The "Rhapsody in Blue" may not possess the spiritual content of "The Afternoon of a Faun," but it was worth writing. If Paul Whiteman had not existed, would Gershwin ever have written it? Who would have played it in public? The Philharmonic-Symphony? The League of Composers? I leave the answer to you.

This does not mean that these Whiteman concerts are presented with any expectation of hitting the bull's-eye every time, or of unearthing unsuspected masterpieces. They are experiments, literally. They are conducted in the hope of being what similar musical experiments sometimes are not: entertaining. But as to their permanent value in the literature of music—that verdict is up to you. The last thing that Mr. Whiteman expects, I imagine, is that all the numbers on his programs will turn out to be the artistic equivalents of the finale of Mozart's symphony in E-flat major. He would be thunderstruck if they did—and, considering the nature of his business, probably horrified.

I have not heard this program in rehearsal; but my guess is that it will assay pretty much as any other experimental program would, whether presented by Paul Whiteman, the League of Composers, or the Philadelphia Orchestra—that is, a large percentage of paste, a few rhinestones, and, just barely possible, one small diamond. At least it will be amusing paste, and unpretentious paste, and the rhinestones will not have announced themselves as diamonds.

One very real value his programs do possess for anyone who is seriously interested in modern music. They suggest enormous possibilities, still unrealized, in the field of symphonic orchestration. The Whiteman instrumental combination offers timbers and colors that the symphony orchestra might, with profit, borrow. Listen to the rich quality of a quartet of saxophones played by men who know their business; the low-comedy barking of "wah-wah" mutes; the beautiful barytone quality of a trombone played with a real legato; the wistful, disembodied, wholly new tone color produced by a brass choir played with what, of all things, are known to the trade as "stuffy" mutes.

One more word before we get on with the business of listening. If, despite the fact that you find the music an outrage, the instrumental technique blasphemous, and Mr. Whiteman's judgment deplorable—if, despite all these calamities, you find yourself having a good time, don't be too resentful. As a class, the American music lover has one unfortunate characteristic from which his European contemporary is free: snobbishness. Socially speaking, we are reasonably democratic. We are willing to like a man for what he is, regardless of whether he is in the social register or not: but when it comes to music, we demand credentials. The Continental listener asks, of new music, "is it interesting and entertaining?" Our first question is, "will it live?" Music, with us, is a serious business, and we go to concerts much as we go to church. The idea that one might listen with pleasure to music that aimed to do nothing more than entertain, seems, to far too many of us, a scandalous suggestion.

This attitude is a mistake. The disconcerting thing about art is that the classics never knew they were going to be classics. Peter Breugel, who was a comic-strip painter if ever there was one, may turn out to have been as good a man as Franz Hals; a musical comedy score, hastily thrown together around a childish book by a small-town producer (and panned by the local experts, I may say), may turn out to be "The Magic Flute," by the revered master, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. You never can tell. So with this music that you are about to hear. Enjoy it or be bored by it, according to your musical palate; but don't worry about its message. If it has one, it will survive your disapproval. If it is worthless, it will die. In neither case will it corrupt your descendants.

Puffers And Pouters.

THE DEATH of Charles L. Cooke, the ceremonial officer of the State Department, brings to notice the unbelievable pettiness and feminine vanity and jealousy of the men who personify the great and little nations of the earth in foreign lands. Not that Mr. Cooke himself shared these vices.

It appears that he was a pretty good fellow and merely recognized their existence in the diplomats and statesmen and the great soldiers and sailors of all nations, not excepting our own. He served his country well by preventing teacup tempests which, in an extreme view, might have led to another slaughter.

It was all Mr. Cooke's job in the State Department to keep peace among the he-tabbies of world diplomacy, the vain and sensitive military heroes in horse feathers and gold lace who are sent around the world as attaches, and the elegant sod busters and lawyers of American official life as well.

He was the one who saw to it that they were presented precisely according to their precedence and seated thus at official dinners. He kept the pouting and sulking representatives of great nations at opposite ends of the room when the great war was on, and, having worked out a plan in his head through long experience in the State Department, he finally reduced it to a written formula for the guidance of his successors.

IT MAY SEEM ABSURD that a nation with this country's rather ostentatious democracy in purely social matters should require the services of not only one expert but a whole staff to make sure that some great nation is not insulted by the improper seating of its Ambassador or some gaudy colonel of His Majesty's horse marines at dinner.

But, for all that democracy, there was a great dither a few years ago over the grave question whether Mrs. Dolly Gann, the sister of old Charlie Curtis, a blanket Indian and one-time jockey and, incidentally, the best poker player in town, should go in to the dining room before or after Alice Longworth. Old Charlie himself once might have preferred a skillet of eggs on a high stool at the Owl Lunch, but he had become Vice President, and people get peculiar ideas after a few years in Washington.

A strange trade was Mr. Cooke's, although he was by no means alone in it, for there are Charlie Cookes in all the great capitals, chewing their nails and tearing the sheets in the night over delicate problems of etiquette involving mortals who tie their napkins behind their ears when they are scoffing in the privacy of their embassies.

• • • •

GREAT BRITAIN'S own Charlie Cooke, whatever his name may be, is having his headache even now, far in advance of the coronation foolishness, about the case of Haile Selassie and Mussolini's man.

Britain doesn't recognize the conquest of Abyssinia, and Haile Selassie apparently expects to show up at the party with his umbrella and red underwear, and the Duce has been popping his eyes and blowing out his cheeks in indignation. If Selassie goes Mussolini's man won't, and the Duce might whip a war out of that. Do Englishmen want to die over it?

What to do in a case like that? What to do in dealing with an entire corps of obdurate and childish adults who can perceive the most trivial oversights or errors as willful official insults to the proud and mighty nations which they have the honor to represent? Their trouble is that they do represent their governments and presently come to feel that they are the nations themselves.

They sulk and scowl and pull down their lower lips if someone of inferior rank gets more soup or an extra nod from the hostess. They dress up in masquerade suits and funny hats like the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise, and they ought to burst out laughing when they see themselves in the mirrors. But instead, they arch their necks and try to suck in their abdomens and think, "How well I am looking tonight!"

I wouldn't go so far as to say that you could get up a major league war because some ornery adolescent in spangles and duck foliage got nosed out by another in billiard cloth and a drum major's sash in the rush for the goose liver canapes. But the loser would be sure to mark it off on his cuff and send the cuff to his foreign office, where it would be filed in the archives against some future day when the peasants might be called on to die avenging a long and deliberate series of foul provocations.

Responsibility

By William Lyon Phelps

'Faithfulness.'

In an excellent article recently published in the Watchman Examiner, with the arresting title "Faithfulness," written by Prof. Arthur Stevens Phelps, of California, there appears this quotation from Walter A. Edwards, who was for many years an admirable teacher in the high school at Los Angeles. "Fortunately, we are responsible not for the whole world but only for the faithful discharge of the definite task committed to us."

In these days when so many professional reformers are endeavoring to reform everything except themselves, this sentence seems to me neither superfluous nor impertinent.

• • • •

James Russell Lowell, in his brilliant essay on Gray, remarked that in the eighteenth century "Responsibility for the universe had not been invented." Perhaps that was one reason why so many individuals accomplished so much.

In my sophomore year at college I asked advice of an old man. I said that I was undecided what I should do after graduation. He said that graduation was more than two years in the future and asked me, "Haven't you some lessons to prepare for tomorrow?" And, as I answered in the affirmative, he said, "Learn them."

In Turgenev's novel "On the Eve," a father is somewhat bewildered by the advanced views held by his daughter. The situation is not wholly unknown today. The father remarked with a smile that his daughter was a radical; that she had a heart so big she loved the whole world—in fact, she seemed to love everybody except her own father.

• • • •

One difficulty with many schemes of reform is that in them there is no place left for individual responsibility. Millions are told that if the scheme of government were different they would all be happy and prosperous; when it is just possible that some individuals might begin immediately to work a little harder at the present job.

Years ago, the candidates for the job of cleaning the spittoons at the capitol building in a certain State were forced to write answers to a comprehensive examination. One of the questions was "How far is the sun from the earth?" and one of the answers was, "I don't know; but it is not far enough to interfere with the performance of my duties." I believe he got the job.

"All's Not Gold"

The venerable gold piano at the White House which came to live there in the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt is soon to retire to the National Museum.

Once upon a time an attractive young school teacher from Massachusetts shepherded a group of students to Washington to see the Capital at vacation time. Of course, the East Room and the gold piano were among the sights. The young teacher stepped up to the piano and put her hand on it.

"Please do not touch the furniture," admonished a guard, tapping her on the shoulder.

This teacher told the story years later.

"The piano was so ugly I felt like kicking it," she said.

That teacher was Grace Goodhue. She became Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and found the piano still there when she became mistress of the White House. Evidently, she never changed her opinion about it, for she is said to have confessed that she did give it a couple of kicks when she could do so with no one to say her nay.

Price Cutting

Upholding Of New York Fair Trade Act Raises Debate On Resale Price Maintenance; Experts Differ As To Effects.

By Anna P. Youngman.

ON MARCH 9 the New York State Court of Appeals, reversing an earlier decision, sustained the constitutionality of the Feld-Crawford fair trade act.

That law declares that any person "willfully and knowingly" selling or offering for sale any commodity at less than the price set by the manufacturer of trade-marked or branded goods is engaged in unfair competition. Those feeling themselves damaged by such price-cutting are entitled to bring suit.

The next day one of the large department stores of New York City ran a full-page advertisement in the newspapers stating that it intended to attach identifying labels to the goods of manufacturers and wholesalers who resorted to this law to force higher prices on the public. It called attention to "price-free" merchandise bearing its own private label and indicated that it would be glad to carry stocks of branded merchandise sold without price restriction.

This advertisement was inserted by a concern selling many classes of trade-marked goods at substantial discounts from scheduled prices. It was the defendant in a suit brought against it by a well-known publishing house more than a year ago for violation of the Feld-Crawford act. The Court of Appeals then declared that act to be "an unauthorized restriction upon the disposition of one's property and unconstitutional within former decisions of the United States Supreme Court."

Supreme Court Upheld Similar Act In Illinois.

LAST DECEMBER, however, the Supreme Court upheld the Illinois fair trade act, which is substantially similar to the New York act. It declared that trade-marked or branded goods are "legitimate aids" to the creation or enlargement of goodwill and asserted that the sole purpose of the Illinois law is to "afford a legitimate remedy for an injury to the good will which results from the use of trade-marks, brands or names."

The court was very careful to avoid expressing an opinion upon the merits of the law, stating that there is "voluminous evidence" tending to show that price cutting by retail dealers is not only injurious to the good will and business of the producer and distributor of identified goods, but injurious to the general public as well." The court added, however, that there is "evidence, opinion and argument to the contrary; but it does not concern us to determine where the weight lies." The recent reversal of the earlier New York decision invalidating the Feld-Crawford act was a sequel to this Supreme Court ruling and is cited by the State Court of Appeals as the reason for it.

One of the arguments advanced against the law in the advertisement of the New York department store, is that it would protect price raising rather than price fixing. That is denied by advocates of resale price maintenance, who claim that the practice neither raises prices nor prevents competition.

Certainly laws like those of New York and Illinois are not price-fixing enactments in the usually accepted sense of the term. They are simply designed to prevent distributors of trade-marked goods from selling them below the minimum resale price set by manufacturers, even when such selling concerns may not have any contract with the manufacturers.

Congress And States Concur In Act's Theory.

LAWS SIMILAR to those of New York and Illinois have already been passed by 28 States and legislation of the same type is now pending in 16 other States. On March 11, furthermore, the House Judiciary Committee reported favorably on the Miller-Tydings bill which would amend the Sherman antitrust act by legalizing contracts prescribing minimum prices or conditions of resale of branded or trade-marked goods in States where such contracts are lawful under State laws. This bill, said to have a good chance of passage, is designed to strengthen State fair-trade acts but does not apply to States without such legislation. It is evident, therefore, that the American people are to have abundant opportunity to test the virtues and defects of legalized resale-price maintenance.

The right of the individual manufacturer of trade-marked goods to refuse to deal with distributors whose price policies are not to his liking is, of course, uncontested. Hence a good deal of pressure can be exerted by owners of trade-marked goods to force compliance with suggested price schedules or to prevent excessive price cutting without resort to legislation. In fact many opponents of resale price maintenance laws insist that the existing right to refuse to deal with price cutters provides all the protection against predatory price cutting that is necessary.

Advocates of resale price maintenance, on the other hand, insist that legislation is essential to prevent a form of price cutting particularly injurious to small retailers. They argue that any tendency to raise prices of protected trade-marked goods will be kept in check by the actual or potential competition of unbranded goods, private brands, or other competing brands of less well-advertised goods.

Remedial Effects May Be Offset By Evils Of Law.

ONE IS FORCED to conclude from the conflict of expert opinion, that in some cases definite abuses may be corrected by legalizing resale-price maintenance while in other cases the remedy is likely to prove worse than the evils at which it is aimed.

Representative Celler, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, who has announced that he will vote for the Miller-Tydings bill, nevertheless characterizes it as "dangerous medicine for an obvious cancer that should be eradicated, namely predatory price cutting." He is fearful that resale-price maintenance laws, while presumably offering protection to manufacturers and producers of trade-marked articles will be used to coerce them into setting exorbitantly high resale prices designed to increase the profits of distributors at the expense of consumers.

All these threatened dangers—consumer exploitation, manufacturer exploitation and wholesaler-retailer exploitation—may possibly materialize as a result of this legislation. Against such possible abuses, however, must be weighed the benefits of putting a stop to "loss leader" selling of trade-marked or branded goods—a practice which may squeeze out competitors of the price cutter without benefiting consumers who may be forced to pay higher prices for other goods to offset the losses on the bargains offered them.

Loss Leaders Differ From Cut-Rate Bargains.

HOWEVER, sales at a loss to attract trade are very different in theory, if not always easy to distinguish in practice, from the price cutting done by firms that sell trade-marked articles below scheduled prices. Very often such cut rates may yield good profits, either because the price cutter has the advantage of buying in large quantities at a discount from the manufacturer or because he has a large turnover or a more economical system of handling goods. While the resale-price maintenance laws make it easier to prevent loss-leader selling, they should not be confused with legislation specifically aimed to prevent sales below cost for the purpose of luring trade away from rivals.

So far as consumers are concerned, an adequate number of reasonably efficient retail establishments selling goods at a fair profit constitute the best possible protection against overcharging. If resale price-maintenance laws help to prevent predatory price cutting they will be of service to consumers, to producers of the trade-marked goods whose property in the good will created by advertising will be protected, and to distributors assured against destructive and uneconomic forms of competition. But where such laws are used as a means of boosting prices unduly, sales will be reduced, and in the long run producers and distributors will suffer from such overreaching tactics.

Apart from the economic aspects of this legislation there is the question of enforcement to consider. So long as some States fail to pass such laws, as Representative Celler points out, even with the proposed Federal law to aid enforcement, a merchant on the "free" side of a State line might attract trade from the other side by cutting prices at the expense of a competitor on the price-maintained side of the boundary.

Moreover, there are innumerable ways in which prices may ostensibly be maintained while in reality being reduced by special concessions, extra services, etc., to customers. In short, the effect of these laws will depend very largely upon the character of the price-fixing policies pursued. The Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination law has already caused a good many important adjustments in price policies. It is a foregone conclusion that enforcement of this law in some cases will advance prices.

If resale-price maintenance acts should also encourage an advance in prices of trade-marked goods, as often asserted, the consumer will have additional cause to complain of the rising cost of living.

Philippine Army Incident.

Manila.

WHEN THE PHILIPPINE gold boom came just in time to nip the economic depression before it hit rock-bottom, observers here commented that President Quezon was a lucky man. They had an occasion to repeat the same remark the other day when, while the Philippine President, who is now in Washington, was busy explaining that there is no attempt to militarize the islands, a number of enlisted men in the Philippine army staged a shooting affray, thus giving the Philippine cabinet an opportunity to tell all and sundry that: (a) In the Philippines the civil authorities are supreme; (b) the Philippine army is a citizen army; and (c) no military clique in the islands will ever rear its ugly head.

The incident could not have been more perfect, in so far as disabusing American minds of the nature of the Philippine defense plan was concerned, if a script had been written, and if it had been rehearsed and staged. And the cabinet, at once doing its duty and seizing an opportunity, made the most of it.

• • • •

IT WAS SUNDAY AFTERNOON in Paranaque, a Manila suburb, and the usual neighborhood games were in progress in the wider streets and squares. Straying from near-by Camp Murphy, named after the present Governor of Michigan, a group of Filipino soldiers gathered around an indoor baseball contest.

Presently, a corporal carrying a service pistol which he had just cleaned for his sergeant, straggled by and stopped for the game. But in one of those tense moments when a ball is hit and bases are full, he got so excited that he reached for the ball, thus angering the players and the spectators.

He next reached for the revolver and tried to hold the mob at bay by threatening to shoot to kill, firing in the air to emphasize his threat. A private, one of the original loiterers, jumped in front of the corporal and tried to order him to put away the gun. But in the army a private does not order a corporal around, and there was a scuffle between the two soldiers; the gun was the bone of contention and it was belching fire. In the wink of an eye, the struggle was over. The settling dust revealed the dead body of the private on the ground and the corporal holding the smoking gun above him.

• • • •

BUT THIS was not enough for an afternoon—things had just started to happen. A squad of policemen arrived on double time to place the killer under arrest, but he burned their ears with stable profanity, saying that he would first eat his hat before he would allow lowly cops to paw him. The other soldiers present, nodding their heads in approval, took the culprit under their protection and challenged all and any police to a fight anytime, no arms barred.

The dead private was carried to the general hospital in Manila with vain hopes of reviving him. The killer, still free, went along.

At the hospital, a newspaperman wanted a story of the shooting. The corporal glared at him, emphatically unloaded himself of what he thought of newspapers and told the newspaperman to go wash himself behind the ears. To this the newspaperman answered in kind, whereupon the squad of soldiers, the corporal leading, mobbed him.

Thus, in one afternoon, the army became involved (1) in a fatal shooting, (2) defiance of the civil authorities, and (3) maltreatment of a civilian. Considering the press as a whole insulted, the Manila newspapers out-howled each other in demanding showdown and redress. They raised the issue of an arrogant, overbearing military clique growing without sanction; of the supremacy of the civil authorities over the army; of repeated rowdyism around the various army corps.

• • • •

HAVING KEPT silent for 48 hours, the cabinet finally met and resolved that, under existing laws and under the reiterated policy of President Quezon, no military caste is ever intended to be tolerated, and ordered a simultaneous investigation of the shooting and all its ramifications by the Army authorities and by the Department of Justice.

In announcing the decisions of the cabinet, of which he is a member, Jorge Vargas, secretary to President Quezon and the President's ears, eyes and pen during his absence abroad, made it clear that the investigations, aside from ascertaining the guilt and responsibility of the soldiers involved in the Sunday incidents, will establish once and for all that the army, which the Philippine Commonwealth is organizing, is not the state, much less is it above the state, but that it is subordinate to the civil branch of the government. Furthermore, the citizenry and the citizen army—an organization to which every able-bodied male citizen will be eventually integrated as a regular or reserve—are one and the same.

If the press services picked up the reports of the incident and filed them for the American press, it is a practical certainty that President Quezon will henceforth not have to deny to newspapermen and Congressmen reports to the effect that Field Marshal MacArthur is militarizing the islands. And the press services should have been glad to do so because, since the President went to America, they have not had many news breaks—all is quiet, otherwise, on the Philippine press front.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Long, Long Trailer Winding.

I.

I breakfast in the valley,
I lunch beside a creek,
And often take my dinner
Upon a mountain peak.
The landscapes flash right by me
In one great jumbled mass;
My bungalow has tires,
My homestead runs on gas!

II.

I shave when rounding corners—
So please excuse those cuts!
Ah, life is so eventful
Inside those bouncing huts!
My wife can do the housework
While swaying down the pike
At sixty miles an hour . . .
It's things like that we like!

III.

My home sweet home has bumpers
(Who would have dream't of that
We speak of its "quick pick-up,"
And of our "streamlined flat;"
Our kitchenette's a wonder—
It's speedy on the hills;
Life in our leaping household
Is full of bounce and thrills.

IV.

We have the sweetest ice-box
Just full of tasty bites;
And how it takes our cold cuts
Right thru all traffic lights!
Our dining room's a dandy—
The fastest one yet made—
What sport it is to balance
The hot soup up a grade!

V.

It's full of lamps and gadgets
And cubby-holes galore;
Those dishes, how they rattle
When we do sixty-four!
My wife can wash the dishes
When doing fifty per;
And, drying 'em, the view is
A great delight to her.

VI.

The old-time home? You take it!
Me for the open road!
My house it must go places—
I like a swift abode;
I'm sick of those old neighbors—
The same old scenes each day;
Come, mother, shut the windows . . .
Honk! Honk! We're on our way!

Paris, Commemorating 19th Anniversary Of Big Bertha, Sympathizes With Madrid

Shells First Dropped on Capital Of France March 23, 1918.

By the United Press.

Paris.

With shells and bombs dropping daily into the streets of Madrid, Parisians remember more sharply than ever the day in 1918 when the first Big Bertha shell fell into the streets of Paris, striking terror, and creating a mystery which has been revealed in all its details, 19 years after the first massive shell dropped mysteriously out of the sky.

Tomorrow Parisians will observe the anniversary of one of the blackest days of the war. Ceremonies centered in the Saint Gervais Church, where one of the first Big Bertha shells fell, killing 75 women and children and wounding 90 on the afternoon of Good Friday, 1918.

The firing of the Big Bertha on Paris from a distance of 80 miles was one of the greatest military feats of the war, and puzzled the Allied general staff to the end of the conflict. Afterward it was learned the shells which dropped on Paris at 15 minute intervals on March 23 and for weeks after, had been fired from a forest near the town of Laon, in northern France. But the full details of bringing the giant gun to perfection and of preparing its terrible work have just been revealed by Germans.

Idea Conceived in 1916.

First conceived in November, 1916, by the German general staff, which sought some method of dramatically demoralizing the French rear guard and thus weakening the strong front lines for a great battle, the work of perfecting the gun took more than a year to carry through. In 1916 the general staff called into consultation Prof. Rausenberger, chief engineering expert at the massive Krupp works at Essen, and asked him if its plan were practicable. After a hasty calculation the professor anwsered, "Yes; possible, but difficult."

He was granted full facilities for the work, all of which was done in secret. The problem, that of finding a gun capable of carrying at least 80 miles, was difficult, to say the least. A new fact, just discovered on the German heavy artillery testing grounds at Nieppen, aided him. During tests a new German cannon, which it was calculated should fire 12 miles, actually went almost 24. How was this curious result achieved?

After intense research, the Krupp laboratory specialists found some interesting new phenomena. They found that these heavy shells pierced, in their long, high trajectory, certain layers of the stratosphere where resistance was much less than that calculated, and the effects of gravity largely changed. A new problem, that of an extremely low temperature, —50 centigrade, also had to be faced in constructing such shells, for the Big Bertha would have to fire shells to a height of 24 miles.

Several Foundries Used.

Plans completed, it was decided that the various parts of the new gun should be constructed in various foundries through Germany, to maintain secrecy. In the spring of 1917 the first gun was finished. It was decided to practice off the sea near Heligoland, and the North Sea town of Cuxhaven was chosen for the gun emplacement. To prevent possible spies from seeing the gun in action the concrete base was constructed deep in the ground and only the ugly snout of the giant gun could be seen. In May all was ready and a line of destroyers and airplanes took up their positions along the line of fire to observe the shots. The earth trembled when the gun was fired, but when the column of water arose at the point of landing, it was found to be only about 55 miles distant. The first gun was a failure. In two days all signs of the experiment had disappeared and the specialists were back in their laboratories busy again.

In October, 1917, signs of unusual activity were apparent again at Cuxhaven—the new gun was ready. This time the results were perfect, the gun fired at all ranges up to 75 miles, with an aberration of less than 200 yards from the calculated target. On the fourth day of practice, the gun sank the old ship which served as a target. The gun was scrapped, for its capacity of shots was limited to about 100 and the foundries were busy again hammering out duplicate tubes.

Placed in Crepy Forest.

It was decided to place the giant gun in the Crepy Forest near Laon, 80 miles north of Paris and at Christmas time, 1917, work on the emplacement was begun. By the beginning of February the concrete base was finished. Two great problems remained. How could the gun be fired without the Allies finding its position? How could the shots be recorded in Paris and the targets for the big gun changed?

To solve the first a massive system of camouflage was constructed in the forest, completely hiding the big gun. In addition, it was decided that every time the great gun fired 32 batteries composed of 128 field pieces would roar forth with it. That would confound sound detectors behind the Allied lines. There would be so much confusion in sound location that the big gun would remain a secret. An intricate system of telephones was installed from the giant pit to co-ordinate all the guns by its activities.

The astute German general staff solved the second problem, too.

Madrid Ruins.

Mystery Of Mammoth Cannon With 80-Mile Range Disclosed.

Eight secret agents were installed in Paris with the sole duty of reporting on the hits of the Big Bertha. News from this unit was to be passed by way of Switzerland, and would arrive at the big gun within three hours. A little practice assured the Germans that they could rely on the speed and accuracy of their eight spies.

One Shot Cost $10,000.

Finally, on March 18, the gun was in position and everything was ready and the gun was prepared to spend its $10,000 a shot. German planes cleared the skies and at dawn a tremendous roar from 129 guns shook the earth on the northern front. Only one of those guns counted, and for hours the general staff waited for word from Paris. For four days they waited, and finally word came that nothing had hit Paris. The giant shell had vanished into air!

Undaunted, it was decided to try another shot. On March 23 in the early morning another roar shook the front. Three and a half minutes later there was a tremendous explosion on a quay in the Seine, two people were killed and many wounded. The spies worked swiftly. Hardly had the police arrived on the scene before another tremendous explosion shook Paris, destroying several apartment houses on the Boulevard Henry IV, 20 minutes later another landed before the Gare de l'Est, in the midst of departing soldiers.

With the regularity of a terrible hammer every 20 minutes Paris suffered these tremendous shocks. Consternation, but not terror reigned in the French capital. Airplanes rushed into the sky, but there were no trace of a plane. Finally, although it seemed unbelievable, the French army decided that there must be a gun somewhere near the front. But firing almost 80 miles on Paris? The idea was a greater shock than the shells falling on Paris.

Gun Never Found.

It was rapidly proved that the shot came from the Crepy forest, but it was impossible to find the gun in the massive cannonade that occurred with nerve-wracking regularity. The Allies rushed a mass of batteries to the front, hundreds of cannon fired blindly into the Crepy forest, and one shell actually landed so close that it half buried Big Bertha in dirt. But throughout the remaining months of the war, Big Bertha, the scourge of Paris, never was discovered.

The Big Bertha gun was a typical achievement of the mentality of the German high command. Its object was to strike terror into the hearts of the defenders of the French capital. Instead of terrorizing, the gun only strengthened the resistance of the French. Since Big Bertha fired on Paris there has been only one other case of heavy artillery firing on a city, the batteries hammering at Madrid.

Again there, a surprising fact has been driven into the minds of military tacticians—Big guns can do tremendous damage, but they only tend to stiffen, rather than destroy the morale of defending troops and civil populations.

Protests Greet Landis Address On Sit-Downs

Senators Resent Claim Action Yet May Be Found Legal.

the President investigated issues involved in such an industrial dispute.

An election was ordered to be held as quickly as possible by the Baltimore Merchants & Miners Transportation Co. to choose representatives for collective bargaining purposes among the engineers and deck officers of that line, in a ruling of the National Labor Relations Board.

Statement by Borah.

In his statement to The Post on Landis' speech, Senator Borah said:

"I read the accounts of the speech, but they did not give me any clew as to how he expects such a change in legal concepts to come about.

"I suppose it is dangerous to prophesy as to what legal concept eventually will be embodied in our system of jurisprudence, but I can not conceive of any legal concepts which would make legal a sit-down strike. I do not see how under our system there could arise such a concept."

Questioned as to the parallel between sit-down strikes and lockouts by employers, suggested Saturday by Landis, Borah said:

"I would not want to say finally as to that. There is quite a difference between the two propositions, to my mind."

Senator Burke's comment follows:

"I would say that if Mr. Landis seriously suggested that sit-down strikes are legal he is thereby thoroughly disqualified to serve either as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission or as dean of the Harvard Law School. I do not know that he did so suggest, but if he did I think he is not qualified to serve either in his present capacity or that to which he has been chosen.

"As a graduate of the Harvard Law School, I would regret it greatly if anyone holding those views became dean."

"Example of Barbarism."

"Sit-down strikes are an extreme example of barbarism entirely outside the law. They have no legal justification whatsoever, and the sooner they are stamped out altogether the better it will be for the country.

"Furthermore, I would like to say that if Mr. John L. Lewis does not promptly put an end to the sit-down strike, as he has it within his power to do, I would rank him as public enemy No. 1."

"If there should be a development of that sort," said Sumners, with reference to Landis' address, "it would only be as a part of a period of governmental and economic anarchy. It would represent a failure of Government and a resort of individuals to violence to enforce their desires, the use of a sort of physical strength to attain their ends.

"It would be a reversion to savagery which could not happen under a government of right and would not be possible under the reciprocal arrangements of an organized society."

In contrast to these reactions was that of Hunt, who said:

"It (Landis' attitude) seemed sound. The relation between employer and employe is not a simple contract, it has social implications. Obligations to permit collective bargaining and refrain from espionage and similar tactics are implied in the relationship.

Stresses Worker's Rights.

"The law, on the subject of sit-down strikes is in the state of emergence, the establishment of new rights and duties in employer-employe relationships is still going on. In Japan, for instance, an employer is forced to hire an employe for a year. Big employers here should not be permitted, during periods when there is a lull, to dismiss employes hired during peak periods. It is too simple just to say that a sit-down strike is illegal, and let it go at that. The question has many implications and requires much thought."

Other lawyers in the District, however, were inclined to an antagonistic view. Exemplary of these was Walter M. Bastian, who has just finished a term as president of the District Bar Association. He said:

"I cannot concede that Landis is correct. Man's property has always been held sacred. To permit someone else to occupy property is not my idea of property rights as set forth in the Constitution."

W. P. Chrysler, Miss Perkins Talk

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins continued her efforts yesterday to arrange a settlement of the Chrysler strike.

Labor Department officials reported Miss Perkins, who is in New York, conferred with Walter P. Chrysler, and, by telephone, with John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

She also talked by telephone with Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan and James F. Dewey, veteran labor department conciliator, in Detroit. She was represented as seeking to arrange a peace conference between the principals in the sit-down strike.

Week's Output Of New Films Is Varied Lot

'Seventh Heaven' Leads the List of Coast's Brief Preciews.

By Henry Sutherland.

Hollywood, March 21 (U.P.).—Previewing the picture Parade:

"SEVENTH HEAVEN." (Twentieth Century-Fox). This Parisian idyll retains its appeal through the years and despite rather ordinary performances by James Stewart and the highly touted Simone Simon.

No audience has ever failed to fall for the John Golden play or the silent screen version (1927) in which Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrel cleaned up so resoundingly. This edition should fare no worse.

Of the two leads, Stewart's work is probably the better, although he's a bit too rugged and honest-appearing for that "very remarkable fellow" and glib egotist, "Chico."

As "Diane," the dance hall girl turned from suicide in the Seine to a seventh story "heaven" by the young sewer cleaner, Simon walks through prettily, pouts constantly, and at no time puts over the emotional qualities of the part with conviction.

Otherwise, J. Edward Bromberg plays the astrologer in par, Victor Killian and Gale Sondergaard are effective as "Chico's" skyline neighbors, and Jean Hersholt splendid and unrecognizable as the priest.

Lesser parts are capably handled by Gregory Ratoff and John Qualen.

Production is first class, although photography is a bit on the dark side.

"HER HUSBAND LIES." (Schulberg-Paramount). Formula melodrama which suffers chiefly from total lack of suspense.

Ricardo Cortez plays a gambler attempting to break his younger brother (Tom Brown) of the gambling habit, succeeding eventually at the cost of his life.

"MIDNIGHT TAXI." (Twentieth Century-Fox). Alan Dinehart—worthy of much better parts—is again anchored to a picture in the skidding G-man cycle.

Dinehart does an agent posing as a cab driver to catch a counterfeiting gang, and entire action takes place at night, which gives Barney McGill a chance for some fine photography.

Sig Rumann, Gilbert Roland and Harold Huber made acceptable gangsters, and Frances Drake goes through the motions of the love interest.

"THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN." (Warner Brothers). Hugh Herbert turns in another screwball comedy of his own familiar type. Otherwise the picture is notable as American debut of 17-year-old Mary Maguire, imported as the "Mary Pickford of Australia."

Miss Maguire, a strikingly beautiful lass, plays with spirit and understanding, and will be seen in better roles.

"WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG." (Universal.) With the exception of one song, sung with surprising talent by Virginia Bruce, this musical is soporific.

The number is "Would I Be Wasting My Time," tunesmithed by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson.

The story is one of those things, with good-looking Kent Taylor as a hotshot press agent who puts a small-time singer over in big time.

Gayety

"LADIES IN LINGERIE." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 27 scenes, starring Mike Sachs and Alice Kennedy, supported by Manny Keye, Lou Petel, Sam Gould, Reynard & Marcia, Lillian Dixon, Ina Thomas, Marian Hollis and the Dancing Ensemble. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

As a general rule when the name of Mike Sachs is associated with a burlesque show, there will be precious little else which matters. And, of course, where Mike is, so also is his feminine foil, Alice Kennedy. Well, the rule holds this week, despite the alluring title of "Ladies in Lingerie."

Sachs needs no introduction—nor review. There are no comics on the wheel that can do what he can do and, as the saying goes, get away with it. His is not what might be termed parlor entertainment, but what he does, and the way he does it, is tops with Gayety audiences.

With Mr. Sachs is Alice Kennedy, than whom burlesque has no better straight woman. She can handle her lines with a glibness and a surety that is remarkable, and, furthermore, has a singing voice alone worthy of being especially billed. These two people might easily carry the show. Yet Lou Petel, who needs no instructor in the duties of a straight man, also adds his talents.

There are others on the bill. One should mention brunette Lillian Dixon, who does an Ann Corio in the aisle and who exhibits a rare singing voice; Ina Thomas, performing in the manner of Edna Dee, and Marion Hollis, the singer and dancer of commendable talents. Assisting on the comedy side is Manny Keye, Sam Gould acts as the second straight man and does the tenor warbling.

Adding a bit of novelty to the program are Reynard and Marcia, a dance team performing a pseudo tango and a more orthodox ballroom number to an unusually fast four-four rhythm.

Rialto

"THE FRONT PAGE." United Artists release of the Caddo picturization of the play of the same name by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, with adaptation by Bartlett Cormack, featuring Adolph Menjou and Pat O'Brien, supported by Edward Everett Horton, Walter Catlett, George E. Stone, Mae Clark, Slim Summerville, Matt Moore, Spencer Charters, Maurice Black and Effie Ellsler. Directed by Lewis Milestone.

"MAMA LOVES PAPA." Paramount picturization of a story by Keene Thompson and Douglas MacLean, with screen play by Nunnally Johnson and Arthur Kober, starring Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles, supported by Lilyan Tashman, George Barbier, Morgan Wallace, Walter Catlett, Tom Ricketts, Warner Richmond, Frank Sheridan and Tom McGuire. Directed by Norman McLeod. Reviewed (revivals) by Richard Q. Jones.

No type of story on the stage or the screen has been so decried as has that involving the representation of the gentlemen of the press, but in "The Front Page,"—written out of life by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who really know their newspapers and dthea[illegible]ters—the stigma has been eliminated, and the play—on the stage and the screen—stands accepted as the truest delineation of reporters at work yet brought before the public.

The current revival will be recalled as the picture which brought Adolph Menjou back to the screen and the one which first brought Pat O'Brien into prominence. The former, in the role of the hard-boiled managing editor, and the latter as the star reporter.

The companion picture is "Mama Loves Papa," one of the first pieces in which Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland were teamed in a husband-and-wife domestic comedy. Time has since proved the worth of this amalgamation, and that this picture is now on view should b its own best recommendation.

Only a release of the Paramount News, with special clips of the Texas school catastrophe, is on the bill, but with "The Front Page" and "Mama Loves Papa" one needs little other divertissement.

Little

"THE KING OF KINGS." Paramount release of the Cecil B. DeMille production based on the Biblical story of the life of Christ with screen play by Jeanie McPherson, featuring H. B. Warner, Rudolph Schildkraut, Jacqueline Logan, Joseph Schildkraut, Kathryn Cummings, Robert Edeson and a host of others. Directed by Cecil B. DeMille. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

With the advent of Holy Week, it is fitting and proper that one of Cecil Be DeMille's greatest productions—"The King of Kings"—should continue its run at the Little Theater, coming over from the Rialto, where it opened last Wednesday.

"The King of Kings" is not a picture about which to write; rather is it a picture to be seen and felt, for the deep respect, the dignity and the forthrightness of the production. It deals with the later years of Jesus of Nazareth.

That estimable actor, H. B. Warner, is seen in the title role, supported by a company of the screen's best players (a decade ago, and even now).

Supporting the feature, but not entirely complimentary thereto, are "The Adventurer," an early Charles Chaplin comedy, and "Spring," a Technicolor cartoon.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Five Popular Stars Are at Work in Elaborate New Productions Soon to Be Seen on Capital Screens

The Warner Brothers Promise Patrons of Earle and Metropolitan Rapid Succession of Prime Hits; 'Maytime' Is Not to Be Road-Showed Because of Epidemic; Katharine Hepburn to Be Feted Tomorrow; Odds, Ends of News and Theatrical Shrapnel.

FIVE of the Warner Brothers' outstanding stars—Dick Powell, Kay Francis, Bette Davis, Edward G. Robinson and Paul Muni—are now working in Hollywood on important new productions which promise big weeks for the Earle Theater in this city when they are released, according to announcement made yesterday from the local Warner executive offices.

BELL.

"The Singing Marine" is Dick Powell's new vehicle, a musical comedy which will introduce Doris Weston, with Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Lee Dixon and Veda Ann Borg in important supporting roles.

"One Hour of Romance," based on the continental play of "Mazurka," is the next Kay Francis film. Joe May, famous European director, is megaphoning this production as his first bid for American honors. The cast includes Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp, Jane Bryan, Ian Hunter and Robert Barrat.

"Kid Galahad" combines the talents of Bette Davis and Edward G. Robinson and is reported to be an action-packed drama in which auxiliary roles will be played by Humphrey Bogart, Jane Bryan, William Haade and Wayne Morris, whoever these last two may be.

"The Story of Emile Zola," as has been celebrated in this space before, is Paul Muni's next assignment, with Josephine Hutchinson again playing opposite the star, as she did in "The Story of Louis Pasteur."

In addition to these pretentious works already in active production, final preparations are being made for "The Deep South," Mervy LeRoy's second film for Warner release; "The Desert Song," popular operetta; "Ever Since Eve," a lively comedy costarring Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery, and "Varsity Show," the big musical which will feature Washington's favorite, Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians.

A likely list by all signs and portents.

Contrary to trade paper and "fan" magazine announcements, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's imposing new musical production of "Maytime" will not be "road-showed." This picture, previewed Saturday by a quorum of the ladies and gentlemen of the drama desks—and, incidentally, one of the most lavish of the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy costellar vehicles—will be released nationally at popular prices and will inaugurate its Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday of this week.

This change in distribution plans is directly traceable to the recent "flu" epidemic in Hollywood. Illness has held up the production of "Parnell," costarring Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, and "A Day at the Races," starring the Marx Brothers, both of which originally were set for early March release. In order to fill the gap thus created, it was found necessary to rush "Maytime" into the breach as a regular popular-priced release. Adapted, of course, from the Sigmund Romberg operetta of the same name, "Maytime" prsents John Barrymore at the head of the dramatic supporting cast. He is said to do some of his finest work in this assignment. One trusts he does not attempt to sing!

* * * *

Tomorrow night, in Grauman's Chinese Theater, Los Angeles, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Rudyard Kipling's "Captains Courageous," starring Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore, will be given one of Hollywood's staggering preview premieres, according to a long wire received this week-end from Howard Strickling, of the M-G-M publicity forces.

Mr. Strickling did more than merely announce the inaugural. He profferred this department an exclusive color story on the first-night proceedings under the by-line of Max Miller, author of "I Cover the Waterfront"—a suggestion which we promptly and enthusiastically embraced. Watch for it—the story, that is, not the suggestion.

* * * *

Busy days for the drama desks lie close ahead. This afternoon, "The King and the Chorus Girl" is being unwound in the private projection room of the Warner Brothers in the Earle Theater Building—Joan Blondell, Fernand Gravet, et al.—tomorrow afternoon at 1:30, "A Family Affair" will be unspooled and, at 3, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, is giving a cocktail party honoring Katharine Hepburn in the Presidential Suite of the Willard Hotel.

Miss Hepburn, by the way, these next few days will be providing a double-barreled opportunity, in a manner of speaking, for theatergoers of the National Capital to enjoy the dual expression of her talents as an actress. She opens at the National in the Theater Guild's stage production of Helen Jerome's dramatization of Charlotte Bronte's novel of "Jane Eyre" tonight and beginning Wednesday, will be seen on the screen at RKO-Keith's in RKO-Radio's film version of "Quality Street," in which the principal male role will be played by Franchot Tone.

Dots and Dashes.

Ray Bell—no relation—on last Saturday was announced as having won the third prize in the Nation-wide competition for the best campaign in the interest of "Libeled Lady" . . . He missed a handsome money award by that split-hair dividing line known colloquially as the proverbial eyelash . . . However, the nimble Loew publicist in the Capital recently won a plaque for his work on "Servant of the People," so that helped . . . When Fernand Gravet, soon to be seen with Joan Blondell in "The King and the Chorus Girl," arrived in Hollywood—being a Belgian and resident in France—he was expected to speak English with an accent as thick as a head of cheese . . . His English is perfect, Mr. Gravet having received his education at St. Paul's in London . . . We regret the inadvertence that resulted in Arthur Reilly's having been omitted from the Saturday review of the current stage bill at Loew's Capitol . . . He is doing his microphone "bit" and scoring at each performance . . . The Steel Pier, in Atlantic City, is throwing up the shutters for the Easter week-end, with a flock of bands, Benny Davis and His Star Dust Revue, "Seventh Heaven" and "We Have Our Moments," on its screens, and other attractions running full blast . . . Wini Shaw, headlining the vaudeville portion of the bill at the Capitol this week, is booked to go through the F. B. I. crime investigation department tomorrow morning, under the personal guidance of head G-man, J. Edgar Hoover . . . She is reported to have an especial yen to get a rifle in her hands on the shooting range . . . So everybody gather around the target as the safest place in the building!

Optimism Note.

Handicapping the Weather Bureau purely on recent past performances, we are willing to lay as high as 11 to 10 that it rains on Easter Sunday.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

May Robson told me a pretty story this morning. In 30 years she has taken only one alcoholic drink, and that at the insistence of the late Marie Dressler. It seems that Marie telephoned May one night and asked her to visit. Miss Robson accepted and when she arrived, found two cocktails prepared. She was amazed, because she knew that Marie did not drink either.

But that night Miss Dressler insisted they should lift their glasses in toast, because physicians had just informed her that she had an excellent chance of recovering her health. To that, the two lovely old ladies quaffed their toast. One week later, Miss Dressler suffered the relapse which ended in death!

Patsy Kelly was late on the set, and the director bellowed for her. Miss Roberti volunteered, "She's trying on another girdle. (Perhaps you've noticed, Patsy is getting weighty?) She wears a new one every day. They make her too uncomfortable." At that instant Miss Kelly arrived, and she was dressed to kill, on which I made comment. "Listen, Fidler," she said, "these glamour gals like Lombard and Dietrich can't show me up. The only difference between Garbo and me is—I talk more. And," she added a bit ruefully, "maybe I weigh more."

There is a good laugh in a store window display of a downtown Los Angeles concern. It heralds a national contest that is being staged by a soup manufacturer. The intriguing thing about the Los Angeles display is the huge placard which shouts: "Win a free trip to Hollywood." The fare to Hollywood from that point is 10 cents.

Fresh, that make-up chap at RKO. He was applying powder and paint to Helen Broderick's face when she said, "Give me a mouth like Joan Crawford's." "Can't," snapped the expert, "I only have one cartridge of lipstick!"

Andy Devine, asked by a lifelong friend to give the bride away at a small wedding, jocosely complained, "All I have to say is 'I do.' I want my part built up more." "But what more could you say?" inquired the aghast groom-to-be. "Well, I might pull a Simone Simon," drawled Andy, "and say 'I do. I do.'"

Warner Oland's "Charlie Chan" make-up, while it does not change his face completely, at least serves to hide his real appearance to such extent that strangers pass him by without recognition. So this story which a friend of Warner's passed along is believable. Seems that Warner went into a stationery store to buy a fountain pen. Choosing one he thought he might like, he idly wrote the Latin phrase, "tempus fugit." The salesgirl, peering over his shoulder, asked, "How does that pen write, Mr. Fugit?"

Laryngitis Forces Tibbett to Call Off Appearance Here

A sudden attack of laryngitis forced Lawrence Tibbett, distinguished American barytone, to make a last-minute cancellation of his concert yesterday afternoon as a fashionable and capacity audience was finding seats in Constitution Hall.

Until a half hour before the recital, it was hoped that the singer would be able to appear. Seats on the stage were being sold at the box-office, the main floor and balcony having been sold out.

Tibbett, who was staying at the Mayflower Hotel with his manager, Lawrence Evans, complained of a sore throat yesterday morning. A physician was called and treatments were started immediately. During the afternoon Tibbett and his accompanist, Stewart Willie, tried out a few songs, but the singer's voice was not found in fit condition for a concert and it was decided to call off the engagement rather than risk voice strain.

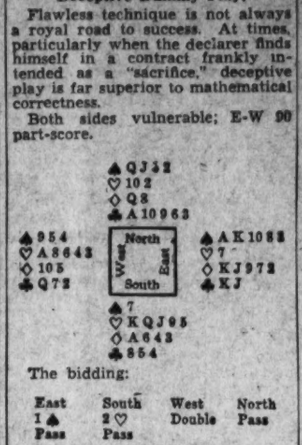
Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, under whose management Tibbett has sung in Washington each season for several years, arranged with Evans to have the singer give his recital Saturday afternoon, April 3.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Deceptive Dummy Play.

Flawless technique is not always a royal road to success. At times, particularly when the declarer finds himself in a contract frankly intended as a "sacrifice," deceptive play is far superior to mathematical correctness.

Both sides vulnerable; E-W 90 part-score.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South fully realized that he was risking catastrophe when he overcalled with a hand having only four winners, but East-West's advanced part-score made some action imperative. It is very doubtful if East, with a two-suiter, should have left in the double, but evidently he felt that either two spades or three diamonds might not succeed.

West opened the nine of spades; dummy covered, and East won with the King, making the correct return of his singleton heart. Declarer covered with the nine, West won with the Ace, and returned a spade. Dummy ducked, and declarer ruffed East's eight.

It was now tempting for declarer to lead up to the diamond Queen in the hope of finding the King in West's hand, but, on the correct theory that this play, could be made later as well as now and that it would be a complete "give-away" of the need to ruff diamonds, declarer chose a different play. He led a club toward dummy and played the nine spot. East, on winning with the Jack, fell a victim to panic. He visualized declarer, with the Queen of clubs, guessing his blank King and running the entire club suit, after drawing West's trumps. A spade lead would merely establish a high spade in dummy, he thought, and thus it appeared to him that his only hope lay in finding West with the Ace of diamonds.

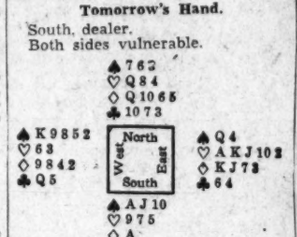
Of course this attempt to rationalize the diamond return actually made by East can be nothing but guesswork on my part. The play was so bad that neither I nor anyone else could find an excuse for it. If the condition that East feared had actually obtained, namely, that South had enough trumps to draw West's, and that, with the supposed Queen of clubs in his hand, South would guess the club situation, then a diamond return by East would not have availed. Dummy still had a trump and, therefore, the defenders could take only two diamond tricks, even with the Ace in West's hand.

The diamond return by East was manna to the declarer. He ducked in his own hand and the Queen won. A diamond to the Ace and a diamond ruff with dummy's ten of hearts was followed by the cashing of the club Ace. After that, declarer's three top hearts completed the eight trick total.

Obviously, on perfect defense declarer would have lost seven tricks, for a 500-point defeat.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



South, with able assistance from both defenders, makes four clubs.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

WHEN ANNE NICHOL'S "Pre-Honeymoon" made its Broadway debut the producer arranged with the Western Union office at 1440 Broadway for the services of Arthur Corley, one of the messengers there. Corley was to appear in a two-line role—rapping on the door and announcing "Western Union." His fee was $1 per show, eight shows a week . . . For the matinee performances, however, Corley hired a substitute—another messenger boy. Unlike Corley, who appeared backstage ten minutes before he was to go on, the substitute evinced a genuine love for the theater. He'd appear before the curtain rise and memorize every line uttered by the other actors.

ONE NIGHT the substitute discovered that it was possible for him to secure a free ticket for the matinee show. Gee, look—I got a ticket for my mother to come and see us," he elated to Allan Fagan, the stage manager . . . "Why didn't you ask for two tickets?" Fagan told him. "It's just as easy to get two" . . . "Y'mean," the lad beamed, my father can come, too?" . . . Fagan arranged for the issuance of the extra matinee ticket.

WHEN the curtain rose that afternoon the substitute was not in his customary place. Ten minutes before he was to go on Arthur Corley appeared in his stead . . . "Hey, what happened to your substitute this afternoon?" Fagan asked . . . "Well, his mother and father are out front today," the messenger stated. "But where is he?" . . . "Well, his parents are here to see the show," Corley explained, "so he had to stay home—and mind his kid sister!"

AFTER Paul Whiteman testified before the Dickstein committee, and sang one bar of "Girl of the Golden West," he told a reporter: "You missed one great story" . . . What was that?" the newspaperman asked . . . Well, Whiteman whispered, "that bar I sang—I sang it flat!" . . . The stenographers Ball is being held tonight at Mecca Temple. And the American Jewish Congress' gala is at the 106th Infantry Armory tonight also.

"RICHARD II" is earning $8,000 a week profit. The mysterious backer of that show is spurning the profit. Maurice Evans, the star of the play, is netting almost $4,000 a week . . . Princess Natalie Paley, who will wed Jack Wilson, already is being addressed as Princess Wilson. And Hollywood addresses Lady Ashley, wife of Douglas Fairbanks, as Lady Fairbanks.

At the premiere of "Having Wonderful Time," Solen Burry, a member of the cast, tried to get Arthur Kober's attention at the final curtain, and shouted, "Arthur, Arthur!" Kober, thinking it was a cry for "Author," started to take a bow.

LYNN MURRAY'S New Yorkers are being eyed by Hollywood talent scouts . . . Charlie MacArthur has made exceptions to the 50-cent fee he exacts from friends who use his hair-growing machine. Anyone who agrees to play him backgammon during the treatment can use the machine gratis . . . Walter Catlett, the screen veteran, classifies Hollywood's citizens this way: "First, there are gentlemen like myself who take it easy. Then there are dirty bums who are busy rehearsing. And finally there are lousy, no-good soandsos who are working!"

"TWO weeks ago Moritz Rosenthal gave a piano recital at Town Hall. One of the customers of McBride's Ticket Agency, anxious to hear the famed pianist, entered the ticket office and asked that they secure and leave at the Town Hall box office "two for Moritz Rosenthal."

AT THE APPOINTED hour the music lover appeared at the box office, asked for his tickets and was told there were none left in his name. He phoned McBride's and raged: "Didn't I order two for Moritz Rosenthal at Town Hall tonight?" . . . "That's right," he was told . . . "Then where are those tickets now?" the music patron asked.

"They're there," was the reply, "in his name!"

BERNHEIMER'S

Browne, Rabbi Debate Subject 'What Is a Jew?'

Skeptic and Religionist Expound Opinions at Reform Temple.

Two distinguished scholars, one a skeptic and the other a religionist, debated last night at the Jewish Reform Temple. The two, presented by the National Temple Forum, argued the question "What Makes a Jew?" The Rev. Dr. de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Spanish-Portuguese Synagogue, of New York, and Lewis Browne, author of "Stranger Than Fiction," "This Believing World," and "How Odd of God," upheld their respective sides of the topic.

Dr. de Sola Pool and Browne were alike in many respects. Both were born in London. Both had been born of Jewish parentage. Both had studied for the rabbinate. They were convincing speakers, but they did differ. They differed on their concepts as to what actually did make a Jew.

What makes a Jew? Is it a religion? It it race? Are there Negro Jews or Jewish Negroes in Harlem? Are the Falashas of Ethiopia Jews? How can a Jew cease to be a Jew?

"Anyone born of a Jewish mother, who has not adopted another religion is a Jew." This was the definition as given by the rabbi.

"What about the father?" was Browne's retort.

Child Is a Jew.

"The father may be a non-Jew," answered Pool, "but in the eyes of our religion the child is a Jew."

Did Browne have a definition of a Jew? He did.

"A Jew," he said, "is a Jew because he is not a non-Jew."

The Rabbi listed three factors which combined to make a Jew, blood, cultural tradition and religion. A man is born of Jewish parentage; he adopts the traditions of his people; but he must adopt the religion fully and with understanding to be a Jew. Religion is the greatest single factor in the life of the man.

According to the definition as stated by Dr. Pool, his opponent for the night was not a Jew. However, Browne in all his statements constantly made reference that he was a Jew. Skepticism to him was just a healthy attitude.

Browne's theory regarding the Jewish mode of life and thinking was not really Jewish thinking, but "city" thinking, he said. The Jews never lived in the country. Crowded in the city in their own ghettos they were forced to "city" thinking. No exercise for their brawn and body. No tilling of the soil. Hence their association with liberal thinkers.

Result of City Thinking.

"Take," he said, "one hundred Jews. Out of the hundred you will find seven radicals. Take on the other hand one hundred non-Jews. There are but four or five radicals. This, then, is a result of "city" thinking and not because the Jews are radicals."

Once a Jew relinquishes the religion he is no longer a Jew.

Browne believes that every person on this earth today had the same ancestry 1,500 years ago. Kings, loafers, medicine men, good people, bad people—all are our forbears. He refuses to argue with mathematics, but he loves to argue with Dr. Pool.

"I came here a skeptic," he announced, "and having heard Dr. Pool I am still a skeptic."

Air Transport Rule By U. S. Is Advised

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday recommended in a report to the chamber that air transportation be regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission just as rail and motor transport now is controlled.

In a statement last night the chamber said in part:

"It is recommended that common carrier airline operators should be required to secure certificates of public convenience and necessity with a suitable "grandfather" clause to protect the legitimate interests of exisiting operators. Regulation of air transport should not follow rigidly the pattern of regulation of other forms of transportation but should be adapted to the special requirements of the industry."

5 Chinese Seized In 2 Opium Raids

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—Federal agents and detectives raided two alleged opium dens in the heart of the Chinese district today, took five Chinese into custody and seized what they described as five complete opium-smoking outfits.

From a rickety house in "Ivy Alley," the raiders dragged three Chinese they said were still reeling from the effcts of opium they were smoking. The officers followed the odor of opium smoke into a darkened room in a nearby building to find two other Chinese they said were in semiconscious condition on tables, their heads on wooden pillows and opium pipes in their hands.

Women's Club of Chevy Chase To Discuss Social Security

Visitors From Guam to Be Special Guests at Session This Morning; Speakers to Include Mrs. Waters, Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Fulton and Mrs. Ray.

"The Progress of Social Security in the United States and Elsewhere" will be the topic at the meeting of the international relations section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase this morning. Miss Ella Given will be in charge of the program. Various phases of social security and its application will be discussed by Mrs. Campbell Waters, Mrs. Morton G. Lloyd, Mrs. William L. Fulton, Mrs. J. H. Ray and Miss Martha Berry.

Special guests will be B. J. Bordallo, chairman of the Guam House of Council, and F. B. L. Gueretto, vice chairman of the Guam House of Assembly. They are in Washington to attempt to secure representation for Guam in Congress. They will lead the discussion.

This afternoon the music section of the club will meet at the home of Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, 101 Leland street. The program will be under the direction of Mrs. Myron Witters. George A. Myers will sing original compositions by Carlotta B. Muir.

Organ selections will be given by Joseph S. Whiteford, and piano selections by Margaret Tolson.

A tea will follow at which Mrs. Harold Dotterer will be hostess.

Representative Sol Bloom of New York will speak on the Constitution of the United States at the meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs this morning at the Hotel Roosevelt. Miss Janet Richards will review current events.

Legislative matters in which the District of Columbia Federation is interested will be presented by Mrs. Morgan Pryse. A musical program under the direction of Miss Alice Keith will be presented. Luncheon will be served between the morning and afternoon session. Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president, will preside.

An important tea took place at the Carlton Hotel yesterday afternoon when the Washington Alumnae Association of the Kappa Delta Sorority entertained the sororities represented in the Pan Hellenic Association of Washington. The special honor guests were Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of the Senator from Florida.

Officers of the Kappa Delta Alumnae Association are Mrs. Henry S. P. Heine, president; Miss Margaret Leiber, secretary; Mrs. Richard Tuve, treasurer; Miss Edith Manning, editor, and Miss Regis Dunnigan, Pan Hellenic representative.

Miss Catherine Ford was chairman of the tea committee, assisted by Miss Regis Dunnigan, Miss Josephine Carberry and Miss Maude I. O'Flaherty.

The wives of workers at the United States Department of Agriculture's field station at Beltsville, Md., met for their second meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. S. P. Cullinan, in College Heights, Md.

Assisting the hostess, Mrs. Cullinan, were Mrs. J. S. Caldwell, Mrs. C. A. Magoon, Mrs. J. Batjer, Mrs. J. W. Roberts, Mrs. E. C. Decman and Mrs. Philip Brierley.

Meetings are scheduled for the third Thursday of the month. The group was organized on February 18 and has 80 members, of whom more than 60 were present Thursday.

The officers are Mrs. G. N. Darrow, president; Mrs. H. L. Crane, vice president; Mrs. M. C. Goldsworthy, secretary, and Mrs. J. R. Magness, treasurer. Mrs. S. E. Gardner is the chairman of the hostess committee and Mrs. Philip Brierley is the head of the publicity committee.

The next meeting will be held on April 15.

2 Men Killed, 7 Injured in Auto Accidents

One Crushed to Death as Car Rolls Down Embankment.

Traffic crashes in and near Washington yesterday took the lives of two men and sent seven other persons to hospitals for treatment.

The dead were Curtis Jarell, 23, of Cherrydale, Va., and Thomas Tolliver, 29, colored, 1319 Minnesota avenue southeast.

Jarell died instantly early yesterday when he was crushed beneath an automobile which overturned and rolled down an embankment on the Lee-Jackson highway 2 miles west of Fairfax.

Two companions, Leo T. Good, 23, driver, and Edward Berlin, 22, both of Cherrydale, escaped with minor cuts and bruises. Good told Fairfax County authorities he was blinded by the headlights of a truck. The car rolled over several times and came to rest at the bottom of the embankment.

Passing omtorists were forced to lift the wrecked machine from Jarell's body. Apparently the machine rolled on him after he had been hurled from the car as it careened from the road.

Tolliver was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital after his automobile ran off the road and overturned at Fairmont Heights, Md.

Two persons were injured seriously early yesterday in an accident at First street and Constitution avenue northwest. At Casualty Hospital they were identified as Carroll A. Fitzgerald, 31, of 4615 Eighth street northwest, and Dorothy Blackwell, 23, of 223 F street northeast.

According to police, Fitzgerald's car collided with one driven by Leo A. Webb, 25, of 621 E street southwest.

Miss Blackwell suffered cuts and bruises and a possible concussion of the brain. Fitzgerald was thought to have a fractured skull, a dislocated right shoulder and lacerations.

Webb escaped with abrasions and bruises.

Martin Boss, colored, 29, of 6055 Tenth street northeast, received a fractured skull and cuts when the automobile he was riding in became involved in an accident at Benning road and Minnesota avenue northeast. He was treated as Casualty Hospital.

George A. Moran, 24, Capital Heights, Md., was injured seriously when his automobile overturned on the Marlboro pike, between Forestville and Meadows, Md.

At Providence Hospital, where he was brought by a motorist, Moran was said to have a broken right leg and internal injuries.

of burying the hundreds of dead, started yesterday, continued throughout the day.

Residents observed the day of mourning set aside by Gov. Allred with this prayer:

"Let us all enter into the house of the Lord today; let us pray for those dear children and their teachers. Let us entreat the Lord to bless those who mourn to comfort the broken hearts of families and friends."

Flower-banked caskets moved from homes to graves as Sabbath quiet enveloped the derricked section. Ministers, here from all sections of east Texas, intoned tributes over grave after grave.

No mass burials were held. Twelve caskets lined in front of the old London Baptist pulpit yesterday afternon marked the largest burial.

Some parents still made a weary round of east Texas funeral homes in search of a few children never found—believed by officials to have been blown to bits.

Still unidentified were about five or six, as closely as it could be checked. Burned clothing, torn features and mangled identification marks made the grim task difficult.

District Woman's Brother Is Victim In School Disaster

A long-distance telephone call from New London, Tex., yesterday confirmed for Miss Jean Grosche, 1432 R street northwest, fears that gave her three days of bitter anxiety.

Her half-brother, Daniel Archer, a science teacher in the New London school, met "instant death" in the explosion that wrecked the building and claimed more than 400 victims last Thursday.

Miss Grosche, a Government employe here, received the news from another brother, who flew from Panama to the scene of the disaster.

"I was afraid of what had happened," said Miss Grosche yesterday, "but I couldn't get any word. I made several telephone calls. No one knew anything."

The long period of uncertainty had brought Miss Grosche to a state of near collapse. She said her brother, who has been living in Panama, will join her here Wednesday or Thursday.

Miss Grosche's family is from Seattle, Wash. She came to Washington to accept employment here. Daniel accepted a position on the teaching staff of the New London school.

Capital's Infant Mortality Rate Among Highest

Ghastly Percentage Due to Syphilis, Which Could Have Been Avoided.

By Gerald G. Cross.

(This article is one in a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

In proportion to live births, more babies under the age of 1 year die in Washington than in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Boston, St. Louis, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Minneapolis, or Cincinanti, to name but a few cities.

A ghastly percentage of these infant deaths is due directly to syphilis. Yet every solitary one is absolutely unnecessary and avoidable.

Nationally, it is estimated that 30 in every 1,000 children have congenital syphilis and 25,000 still births result annually from the same cause.

It is idle even to speculate on the actual number of fetal deaths in Washington due to untreated syphilis in the mother, the number of infected children, the number of women who knowingly or unknowingly are carrying babies who will come into the world with the deadly stamp of the great pox—if they come into the world at all.

Thirty-three Cases Last Year.

Last year 33 cases of congenital syphilis in children under 1 year were reported to the Health Department. How little this means may be appreciated when you learn more than that were under treatment at Children's Hospital alone.

Leaving out the communicable aspect—which is impossible—there is a tiny grain of justification for looking with indifference upon the man or woman who acquired syphilis in an illicit "romance." The wages of sin is death, and all that sort of thing. But what rationalization is there for the child possibly doomed to blindness, insanity or chronic heart diseases through no doing of his own?

If syphilis is detected before the fifth month of pregnancy, the chances are nine out of ten that the child will be born healthy. That's how easy it is to prevent congenital syphilis. But if treatment of the prospective mother is begun too late, or not at all, and the baby is born with the parental taint, cure is as difficult as prevention is simple.

"Congenital cases respond poorly to treatment," says Surgeon General Thomas Parran. "Fime months' treatment during pregnancy is better than five years' treatment after the birth of the child."

Two Treated at Once.

Everything about prenatal therapy commends itself. Two patients are being treated at once, the woman and her unborn child. Chances of infection in her next pregnancy are lessened. The patient need not be hospitalized nor submit to any other extraordinary procedure.

"If every syphilitic woman were treated adequately in every pregnancy congenital syphilis would soon cease to exist," says Dr. Walter Clarke, social hygiene director of the New York City Health Department, and who, with Dr. M. J. Exner, conducted a limited venereal disease survey here in 1936.

And Dr. Joseph Earle Moore, famous syphilologist of Johns Hopkins:

"The stamping out of congenital syphilis is an easy accomplishment compared with the elimination of the acquired infection. Every syphilitic baby is a failure of maternal education, of the public health authority and of the medical profession, which should cause us all to blush with shame.

"Congenital syphilis must go, and must go quickly!"

Which brings us down to cases in Washington; where prenatal clinics of the Health Department do not give syphilis treatments and the number of infected children is so large as to be a commonplace.

Of 735 women who registered at the department's three prenatal clinics during the last fiscal year, only 173 came before the fifth month of pregnancy, that all-important "deadline" in prevention of congenital syphilis.

Wasserman tests showed that 11 in every 100 of these women had syphilis.

When a "positive" is turned up in these Health Department stations, she is referred to the I street social hygienic clinic for treatment. There—if she goes—she is herded with police and court cases, including prostitutes. Who will condemn her if, after a few visits she gives up in disgust?

Routine blood tests are still a rarity in Washington hospitals. There is one which, since last fall, has been giving this service in its obstetrical and gynecological clinics. Prior to that time only the prospective mother who was a suspect received a serological examination.

During the year 1936 a total of 1,622 Wassermans was made on as many out-patients coming to this hospital's prenatal clinic. There were 193 positives. One in every eight of these women had syphilis. Many did not have the faintest idea they were infected.

Many of these newly discovered cases go on treatment, of course, but too many, particularly in the public clinics, are allowed to lapse. Social service workers, public health nurses, indefatigable members of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society and others do their best. But the odds against them, nearly all traceable to inadequate appropriations, are great.

With social security funds, the Health Department is planning to open a prenatal clinic in the central area where syphilis and gonorrhea will be treated, not merely diagnosed. This will be a step forward. But much will still remain to be done if the fight is to be made on the proper scale.

The next article deals with the national crusade against venereal disease.

Moslem Outlaws Raid Hindu, Sikh Farmers

Rawal Pindi, India, March 21 (AP). Moslem outlaws raided Hindu and Sikh rural populations beyond Bannu on the Waziristan frontier yesterday, capturing nine Hindu tradesmen and one Hindu girl, British advices said last night.

Meanwhile, the energetic Fakir of Ipi, charged with stirring revolt among the natives, was reported to have rejected peace offers made by delegates from friendly tribes on behalf of Britain.

Demand Lifts Steel Activity To 89 Per Cent

First Quarter of 1937 Expected to Set New Record.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 21.—With the steel industry using every effort to produce its maximum tonnage, export inquiry superposed on a domestic demand not equaled in many years and orders consistently exceeding shipments the situation resolves itself into struggle by consumers to obtain deliveries and by producers to find means to make a heavier tonnage, says Steel.

Present steel production indicates the probability of the first three months of 1937 establishing an all-time record for an initial quarter. March apparently is headed for production of more than 5,000,000 tons and the quarter for a total of 14,264,000 tons or more. This would exceed output of the first quarter of 1929 and fall only 875,000 tons short of second quarter, 1929, the highest quarterly record of all time, 13,139,000 tons.

With production rates approaching practical capacity steelmakers continue to add somewhat to their operating rate with a resulting advance of the national rate to 89 per cent of capacity, 2 points above the previous week. Pittsburgh added 2 points, reaching 91 per cent. Detroit regained its 100 per cent rate, Cincinnati rose 4 points to 72 and Cleveland 4 points to 82, Wheeling increased 1 point to 97, Birmingham 3 points to 80 and Eastern Pennsylvania half a point to 58 per cent. Buffalo was the only center losing, a decline of 3 points bringing its rate to 80 per cent.

Scrap continues an important factor, with steadily rising prices. Tonnages bought for export have congested railroads at Boston, Port Richmond, N. Y., and other ports in the absence of sufficient ships, and embargoes have been laid by railroads against accepting further shipments to these destinations. Railroads in New England have given notice of substantial increases in charges for storage of scrap in cars, effective April 5, in an effort to reduce the number of cars tied up awaiting unloading.

Complete closing of Chrysler and Hudson plants brought automobile production last week to 99,013 units, a loss of 4,995 from the preceding week. This is the lowest production since the week of February 20, when General Motors was just emerging from its labor tieup.

Continued advance in prices of steelmaking scrap under pressure of heavy consumption has carried the composite price 25 cents higher, to $21.17. Scrap also exerted a lifting effect on the iron and steel composite, raising it 11 cents, to $40.10. Structural steel placed in the past week totals 16,523 tons, compared with 35,780 tons the preceding week and with 12,878 in the corresponding week last year.

Preferred Stock Issues Set Peak

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities with estimated gross proceeds of $429,990,000 became fully effective during January, 1937. This total compares with $698,408,300 in December, 1936, and $275,696,000 in January, 1936.

During January, 1937, the effectively registered preferred stock issues aggregated $134,719,000, the largest amount for such issues registered in any month under the securities act. The chief proposed use of all securities registered during the month was the replacement of outstanding preferred stock issues with other securities, for not only were $72,084,000 of the net cash proceeds of the securitis proposed for cash sale intended for such use, but $68,609,000 of the securities offered for exchange for other securities were to be issued to accomplish this same purpose.

Secured bond issues registered during January accounted for 34.1 per cent of the month's estimated gross proceeds; preferred stock issues for 31.3 per cent; common stock issues for 19.9 per cent; debenture issues for 11.9 per cent; certificates of participation and warrants for 2.6 per cent, and short-term notes for 0.2 per cent.

2 Battleships Will Cost Government 60 Millions

The Navy's two new battleships will cost approximately $60,000,000 apiece, $10,000,000 more than the original estimate, it was learned at the Navy Department yesterday. Plans of the two capital ships, the U. S. S. North Carolina and Washington, will be complete the end of the month.

Rear Admiral William G. DuBose, new chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, said the original estimates of $50,000,000 apiece were made about a year ago, although President Roosevelt used the figure only two months ago. The increase, he said, was due to increased costs of steel and labor, and more complete specifications of the vessels' equipment. He added it was possible, but not likely, the final cost might be even higher than $60,000,000.

Rep. Bernard Appeals For Fight on Fascism

New York, March 21 (AP).—John T. Bernard, Minnesota Congressman, sang the "Marseillaise" alone and joined other speakers in pleading for a "united front" to fight fascism in America at a mass meeting protest today against "Mussolini's invasion of Spain."

The Mecca Temple, with 4,000 seats was filled with capacity. Sponsors said 1,000 was raised to be divided between the Garibaldi battalion (Italian unit) of the International column fighting on the government side in Spain and La Stampa Libera, which was decribed as the only Italian anti-Fascist daily newspaper in the United States.

Wall Street Stirred by Sharp Break in Government Bonds; Money Test Due.

New York, March 21.—Last week was the most exciting one in finance since the last major change in the Government's fiscal policy took place, for it brought into a glaring light the weakness that has been attacking the Government bond market for the last few months!

Last summer, the Federal Reserve Board in deciding upon an increase in bank reserve requirements as a means of lessening the probability of inflation of bank credit from other than Government borrowing announced the nadir of money interest rates. Gilt edged bonds since then have lacked virility. Their strength or weakness after all springs from such prosaic things as prevailing interest rates, rather than from current ideas on policies of the Administration, so long as the latter do not vary too much from the accustomed.

On March 1 another rise in reserve requirements was ordered, and the event passed quietly. Meanwhile banks have been preparing for the final uplift of May 1. The stream of selling that has accompanied such preparations for more cash, added to the liquidation by corporations and others just before the quarterly tax date, has encouraged banks to secure profits already held on paper. This week the matter came to a climax when the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board saw fit to proclaim his fears of inflation, and in private interviews to indicate that Government bonds would be supported on lower yield bases than those then prevailing.

Stocks Also Decline.

That warning against inflation was seconded and supported by Cabinet officers, who went further in suggesting that inflation already was taking place in commodities, and that more taxes were needed if the budget were to be balanced, the last thought bringing opposition among congressional leaders. The upshot of the whole matter was that the country learned that the Administration is alarmed over the prospect for inflation, but it had no assurance that the only effective remedy for the situation would be taken, namely, an end to excessive Federal expenditures.

Heavy purchasing of Government bonds by the Federal Reserve banks and the Treasury during the week brought at least a temporary halt to the decline, after 2½ per cent long term bonds had dropped below par, but the market seemed to lack conviction even at the lower levels. Confusion in gilt edged investments had its repercussion on stocks, which for a long time probably have been discounting inflation as well as reflecting actual improvement in corporation earnings. Prices broke sharply on moderate trading volume, but turned steadier as the trading closed.

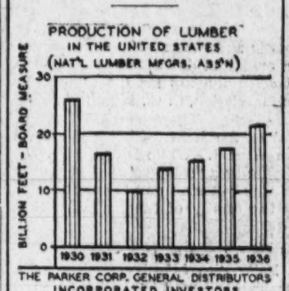
Commodity markets also were upset. Cotton weakened on reports of increased acreage. Wheat sold lower late in the week in response to good weather reports. Metals were unsettled with the hints of control measures here and abroad and the apparent heavy advance buying, much of it of a speculative nature. The Bureau of Labor's wholesale price index nevertheless rose to a new peak, and the Federation of Labor predicted an 8 per cent rise in living costs this year.

If it does no other good, the week's break in bond, stock and commodity prices may serve the useful purpose of once more calling attention to the fundamentals of Government finance. Inflation is a bad thing and it is well that the Goverment recognizes that fact, as well as the additional fact that the building up of a huge debt on bank credit, and the insistence of cheap money, not only as a business stimulant but as an easy aid to the constantly recurring Treasury loans, expose the country to the dangers of inflation.

What is to be expected in near future can only be surmised. Higher taxes might do some good, but far less than would the accomplishment of the same end—a balanced budget—through reduction of expenditure. At any rate Congress recognizes the political drawback of increased taxation. New borrowing is going to become more difficult, even though the authorities continue to insist upon the virtues of cheap money. Attempts probably will be made to hold down speculation by employing certain regulatory powers, such as those over margin trading, and emphasis will be placed on the need for greater executive power to manage our economy.

It may be that the setback in prices, and a possible slowing down in business should the market decline far or should too much interference be decided upon, would force a change in Government plans. Forewarn may be to forearm, but the stimulating forces of speculation already set in motion, running with the natural recovery that is taking place in business, likely will move the country to another boom before the inflationary fires die out.

Building Gains Lift Lumber Production



THE PARKER CORP. GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS
INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., March 21.—Residential building is the great consumer of lumber, thus the fortunes of the lumber industry largely rise and fall with residential building. The big gain in residential building last year gave a boost to lumber production which exceeded 1935 by 23 per cent. Production last year was more than double that in 1932, the depression low.

Exports Rise 52% From Low of 1932

New York, March 21.—The value of merchandise exported from the United States rose in 1936 for the fourth consecutive year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The value was 7.4 per cent higher than in 1935 and 52.3 per cent higher than at the low for the depression 1932. It was, however, less than half the value of exports in the pre-depression year 1929.

Foreign funds available for the financing of business with the United States declined from $4,123,000,000 in 1935 to $3,715,000,000 in 1936. While funds obtained from the sale of foreign goods to the United States rose from $2,048,000,000 in 1935 to $2,419,000,000 in 1936, this increase was more than offset by a drop in foreign gold and silver shipments from $2,075,000,000 in 1935 to $1,296,000,000 in 1936.

American Airlines Reports Gain in 1936

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—American Airlines, Inc., reported today 1936 net profit of $4,589, compared with a loss of $748,369 in 1935.

C. R. Smith, president, said the company transported 255,324 paid passengers last year, an increase of 45 per cent, compared with 1935 traffic. Reveneus totaled $8,334,091, compared with $5,864,536. Of this, passenger revenue accounted for $5,552,817, compared with $3,611,299.

United Wall Paper Sets Price Advance

New York, March 21.—United Wall Paper Factories, Inc., of Chicago, largest manufacturers of wall paper in the United States, announced today advances in prices were necessitated by general increasing prices.

A 5 per cent increase over present prices will be effective on all orders received after April 15 and a 10 per cent increase over present prices on all orders received after May 15. All orders must be for definite quantities and for specified delivery dates.

World Output Shows Decline For January

Recessions Noted in the U. S., Britain, Canada and Germany.

New York, March 21.—World industrial production receded during January, according to the monthly statement on foreign economic conditions just issued by the National Industrial Conference Board. The volume of output declined in the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Germany and in a number of the South American countries. Slight gains occurred in France, Austria and The Netherlands.

Despite the slight decline in Great Britain during January, business activity is still being maintained at a high rate, especially in industries affected by the extensive rearmament program. The metal trades are now working at capacity and are having difficulty in expanding output sufficiently to meet new demands. Building activity is substantially higher than a year ago, with nonresidential construction, resulting partly from rearmament, taking the lead.

In France, government purchasing has contributed to the support of heavy industry, and buying in anticipation of higher prices is in evidence. Exports have benefited only slightly from devaluation, as the rapid rise in the internal price level has canceled much of the advantage that might otherwise be traceable to rising world prices.

International trade, as measured by the combined indexes of the gold value and of the volume of world trade in 75 countries, reached new high points for the recovery period in December. The index of the volume of world trade now stands at 90.3 per cent of the 1929 average; the value index at 42.5 per cent of the 1929 level.

World prices of foodstuffs and raw materials advanced for the third consecutive month during January, bringing the combined index of nine internationally traded commodities to 86.5 per cent of the 1928 average. The largest percentage gains occurred in copper, rubber, tea, silk and sugar. Although tin prices declined in January, they have since risen to the highest level since 1927.

Old Georgetown Homes To Be Open to the Public

Socially Prominent Owners Will Admit Visitors April 9 and 10 in Program to Aid Historic St. John's Church.

By Dudley Harmon.

Georgetown's choicest examples of cherished Chippendale and polished Sheraton, its oldest collections of American glass, and its favorite family portraits will be on view when their socially prominent owners open their homes to the public April 9 and 10 for the annual tour of old houses. Proceeds will go to historic St. John's Church, where Francis Scott Key was once a vestryman and Thomas Jefferson headed the first list of subscribers.

Visitors will find many a treasure behind the rather plain and austere brick walls of these old residences. For example, Mrs. Carroll Greenough, who lives at 1408 Thirty-first street, will show her fine collection of Hancock glass, consisting of goblets and carafes originally owned by John Hancock, Governor of Massachusetts and signer of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Greenough is a collateral descendant of Hancock, and the exquisitely cut and designed collection has been in his family for generations. Mrs. Greenough is in Charleston, S. C., for a brief stay, but will return in time for the tour.

Another home to be on view is that of the former Chairman of the Social Securities Board and Mrs. John Winant. While Mr. Winant has been known modestly to refer to his house as a "cottage," it is in reality a large brick mansion at the corner of Thirty-fourth and O streets. For several generations it was owned by the family of Mrs. W. K. Petty, who now resides at the Fairfax.

A Romantic Home.

"During the Civil War," said Mrs. Petty, "an infantry band on the Union side made this house its headquarters, and used to give concerts in the large garden at the side. My family bought it in '67."

Then for the lovers of romantic tradition there's the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. Mott Gunther, at 2812 N street. The widow of Admiral Decatur moved here from her more palatial residence on Lafayette Square shortly after her famous husband was killed in a duel with Commodore James Barron in 1820. A letter of the times says that the pretty young widow avoided going out after his death for fear of meeting the victor in the duel. She saw plenty of company at 812, however, and is even supposed ot have set her cap for William Corcoran, Washington's most famed philanthropist, but to no avail.

Corcoran's brother lived in the house now owned by Victor Sutro, who came to Washington from New York several years ago. It took the present owner two years to decorate this Georgian residence, which will be opened to the public for the tour. The entire furnishings are in keeping with the early American tradition, and visitors will have an opportunity to see among other things some fine examples of Irish Chippendale consoles. The drawing room of this house is particularly fine.

Walls of Pale Blue.

The walls are painted a pale blue to blend with the heavy curtains of rose brocade. The original marble mantelpiece, of classic simplicity, is still standing, and is matched in interest by a graceful sofa, made in New Orleans about 1815. Downstairs there's a card room with an old whist table, in the center of which is a hole for a lamp bracket, and which is flanked by the only strictly modern touch in the house—a bar in black and silver.

When men were at work recently remodeling the home of Mrs. James Scott Vance, 2823 Q street, they found scratched on a window sill the names of two carpenters, with the date 1867. From that time until Mrs. Vance bought the house it was in the possession of the Nourse family, and Mrs. Emily Nourse, the last descendant, is still living in Washington. The dining room of this residence is paneled in wood which Mr. and Mrs. Vance brought from Italy.

Other homes to be shown during the tour include that of Mrs. Hare Lippincott, 2806 N street; Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, 3267 N street, until recently the home of the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Trubee Davidson, and Miss Margaret Bisland, 3318 N street. Additional houses to be visited will be announced later.

Mrs. William Kerkam, whose mother, Mrs. Theodore Gill, lives in Georgetown, is chairman of the committee arranging for the tour, and other members are the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's; Mr. J. Bernard Wyckoff, Mrs. Edmund Talcott, Mrs. Jefferson Kean and Mrs. Gill.

Woodrings to Attend Opera in Baltimore After Returning Here From Florida Trip

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring will go to Baltimore the evening of March 29 to attend the performance of "Lohengrin" by the Metropolitan Opera Co. They will be guests at a dinner to be given by Gen. and Mrs. Albert Bowley before the production.

Mr. Woodring will return later in the week from a trip to Florida. During his stay he was entertained over the week-end at a luncheon given by Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, of Washington, at the Surf Club, in Miami Beach. Also among her guests were former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, parents of Mrs. Woodring; Mrs. Robert E. Greenwood, another daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Coolidge, and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mack, of Washington.

Mrs. Ward will fly to Nassau for Easter, returning to Washington April 10.

Four Britons, on Good Will Mission Here, To Be Guests of Honor Today at Luncheon

Four members of Parliament, on a good-will mission, will be guests of honor today at a luncheon to be given by the English Speaking Union of Washington at the Willard Hotel.

The group is composed of the Earl of Mansfield, Lord Phillimore, Mr. Victor Raik and Mr. Kenneth de Courcy. On Saturday, Lord Mansfield and Mr. Raik were among the guests at a cocktail party given by Mrs. Campbell Prichett in her apartment at the Cordova. Mr. Raik leaves shortly for Richmond, Savannah and New Orleans, and will speak in each of these cities. Lord Mansfield will visit the Middle West.

Another guest at Mrs. Prichett's party was Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett (Mr. Tibbett sang yesterday at Constitution Hall). Mrs. Tibbett, a striking brunette, wore a brown suit trimmed with fur, and a tiny hat with a crown of gardenias and a nose veil.

Guest of honor at the party was Mrs. Raymond Welch, of Burlingame, Calif., sister of Mrs. Emory Sands, of Washington. Mrs. Welch is leaving today for New York, but will return April 1. Others at the party were the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Scholz, the latter in a black caracul coat and a hat with a nose veil; Mme. van Haersma de With and her daughter, Mlle. Nora de With; the Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mr. Leander McCormick-Goodhart and Mr. Philip Broadmead, of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Mr. Arthur Krock, and Mrs. William MacCracken.

Dr. Diosdado Yap Entertains at Tea

Philippines Charge d'Affairs Guest of Honor.

Dr. Diosdado M. Yap entertained a small company of friends at his house yesterday afternoon at a tea in honor of Quintin Paredes, jr., Charge d'Affaires of the office of the Philippine Resident Commissioner.

Mr. Paredes, jr., is leaving for London to attend the World Conference on Sugar as a delegate of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. Other members of the party include Mr. Felipe Buencamino, of the Philippine National Assembly, and Mr. Urbano Zafra, of the Philippine Sugar Association.

Wedding Set Today For Col. Westbrook

WPA Official to Marry Mrs. Martha Wfl Collings.

By the Associated Press.

Dr. and Mrs. William Turner Wootton, of Hot Springs, Ark., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Martha Wootton Collings, to Col. Lawrence Westbrook, of Washington, chairman of the National WPA Advisory Board.

The wedding will be solemnized today at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Collings studied at Northwestern University, and later studied voice in Chicago.

Col. Westbrook and his bride will honeymoon in Florida and New York, and after April 15 will make their home in Washington.

To Leave in Summer for Stay in Poland

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Margaret Rowe, who is a student at National Cathedral School, with her younger sister, Miss Elvina Rowe, daughters of Mme. Orlicz-Dresser, of Warsaw, Poland, and her former husband, Mr. Roland H. Rowe, of Washington. Mme. Orlicz-Dresser, whose late husband, Gen. Gustave Orlicz-Dresser, was Inspector General of the Polish army, will return to Warsaw the middle of next month after an extended visit here with her daughters and her mother, Mrs. A. G. Neal, with whom they will make their home. They will go to Poland to visit her, accompanied by their grandmother, as soon as school is out.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn Reeve.

The Julio Lozanos, of Honduras are happily and busily engaged in making plans for their trip home. Here just when we are about to have really nice weather (although who can complain about the past winter?) with budding trees, chirping birds and romance in the air—they, the whole family, are packing up bag and baggage to be gone several months. One of the reasons, aside from getting back to Tegucigalpa again, is the very interesting fact that their new home, Villa Roy, has just been completed and is fairly begging for a visit from its "family."

The house—a few pictures have been sent up here—is a miniature castle of buff stone on a hillside. It overlooks the city from the midst of its veritable fairyland of evergreens (seemed strange to us for a Southern country to have these trees around), and all kinds of flowering plants and vines. The name, incidentally, is an interesting bit, too, because the estate is named in memory of the minister's late partner and close friend.

The Lozanos plan to sail from New Orleans on the Santa Marta, April 1, for their home.

Nice to see those two attractive sisters, Hope Jackson and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, together again, and here. They stopped in the Willard Coffee Shop yesterday. Hope, enthusiastic horsewoman that she is, had apparently just come in from a ride, although a glance at her boots would lead us to believe that her exercise was yet to be had, so spotless was her attire. Mrs. Morgan, who always is the last thing in chic, was looking especially nice in an all-black ensemble made smartly plain lines.

Saw good-looking Lela Stiles having coffee and buns in the Mayflower Ship's Cabin yesterday morning. Her black frock's high collar and long sleeves were finished with neat little bits of white linen. Topping this off she wore a wide-brimmed black hat and all in all presented a very fetching picture of what-the-young-business-woman-should-wear.

Also there, was Senator Arthur Capper, who after finishing his morning paper and piping hot beverage, joined some companions at an adjoining table. The three of them were talking away at a great rate, and our ears just tingled to know what they were discussing.

Ah, ha—Easter bids fair to be a pleasantly busy day in spite of bunny and egg filled baskets to be hunted, and new clothes to be paraded. One of the parties that day will be the cocktail affair for which Mary Agnes Young has sent out cards.

The lovely Mrs. Russell Sard and her husband were having luncheon in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh. Between listening to the lilting music, eating, and catching up on topics of the day, they were busy, indeed. Mrs. S. was wearing a brown tailleur.

Later at dinner time in the same popular society haunt, saw "Sis" Safford and Frank Cook dining and dancing. Sis, who is wearing her blonde curls, pinned back from her forehead and in a mass of ringlets, had on a black sheer frock with demure little collars and cuffs.

Date Announced For Easter Ball

Mrs. Howes Will Head Receiving Line for Affair on April 2.

Mrs. William W. Howes, wife of the First Assistant Postmaster General, will head the receiving line for the Easter ball being given at the Shoreham the evening of April 2. Also in the receiving line for the party, which is under the sponsorship of Mrs. Neitah King, will be Mrs. Julien Friant, Mme. Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Mrs. Justin Macklin, Mrs. Allan Gasque and Mrs. Harry Englebright.

Miss Laura Johnson is entertaining at a cocktail party before the dance in honor of Miss Gloria Grosvenor. Mrs. Macklin and Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax, Va., also are giving parties.

Miss Clara Margaret Grantham, of Raleigh, N. C., will be here for the dance, as will Miss Betty Ryder, who is returning home from Eden Hall, Torresdale, Pa., to attend, and will have Miss Margaret Richardson, of National Park Seminary, as her guest.

Miss Genevieve Marsh, who will be home from Sweet Briar and Miss Phyllis Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Richardson, from Hannah Moore, in Baltimore.

Entertain at Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Merrill Kochenderfer entertained at dinner on Saturday evening in honor of the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza.

Newspaper Writer To Address Luncheon

Mr. Harold Hinton, of the New York Times, will be guest speaker today at the third of a series of current events discussions featuring the Monday forum luncheons at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Four hostesses have been named. They are Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Carl Ristine, whose husband is an official at the Justice Department; Mrs. Edward Izac, wife of the California Congressman, and Mrs. Benjamin King.

Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Bankhead Honored at Tea

Large Throng Attends Party Given by Alumnae of Kappa Delta.

More than 100 guests attended the tea given yesterday afternoon by the Washington Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta Sorority, in honor of Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, and Mrs. Charles Andrews, wife of Senator Andrews of Florida, both members of the sorority. Members of sororities represented in the Panhellenic Association of Washington also were honored at the tea, which was held in the Patio room of the Carlton Hotel.

Miss Louise Rood, who teaches music at Sweetbriar College, and is a member of the Wisconsin chapter, played several selections on the violin. She was accompanied by Mrs. Jessie Blaisdell.

Miss Katherine Ford, chairman of the committee, received the guests, wearing a green print frock with a water lily at the neck. Several prominent sorority officials were present, including Mrs. Percival Hall, president of the national chapter—she wore black; Mrs. John F. Warlich, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association; Mrs. C. M. Jansky, president of Alpha Gamma Delta, and Mrs. Henry S. Heine, president of the Alumnas Association of Kappa Delta.

The tea table was decorated with white roses, the flower of the sorority. Both Mrs. Bankhead, who wore a black suit with a silver fox collar, and Mrs. Andrews, in a black frock with a white blouse and bolero jacket, wore corsages of white roses and sweet peas.

Other guests were Miss Aline Prinkert, Miss Maude O'Flaherty, Miss Sylvia Meyer, harpist of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Miss Josephine Carberry.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Eva H. Haley, of Washington, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Alice Haley, to Mr. James H. Hurley, of San Francisco. The wedding will take place in April.

Browns Honor Visitors With Cocktail Party

Hannas, From Cleveland, Feted at Round of Functions Since Arrival Friday; Were Entertained by Churches.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hanna, of Cleveland, who have been feted at a round of functions since they arrived here Friday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown, were honored at a cocktail party given by their hosts yesterday afternoon at their home on Van Buren street.

Among the guests were Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, who entertained at a dinner for them and Mr. Sterling Morton, of Chicago, on Saturday night; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten who gave a luncheon for them on Friday. The Browns also entertained in their honor at a dinner on Friday evening.

The hosts and guest of honor received yesterday in the long high-ceilinged drawing room with a balcony around one side, and windows on the other overlooking Rock Creek Park. Up two steps was the dining room where the buffet table was set with a center bouquet of red tulips in a low bowl. Miss Grace Burton, who poured, wore a silver lame gown trimmed in green with a hat of the same material and a corsage of gardenies.

The hostess wore a lace gown of rough rust color, and Mrs. Hanna was in a flowered print with a small black hat. Maj. and Mrs. Henry S. Leonard, who have been friends of the Hannas for many years, were among those at the party; as were Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiefeler, who knew them in Ohio. Mr. Morton also was there with Representative and Mrs. Church.

Among other guests was the German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, who was surrounded by friends expressing the hope that the report he was soon to return to Germany was untrue. Dr. Ernst Meyer, of the German Embassy, also was present, as were the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Dimitriu, Representative Ralph Brewster, who flew back a few days ago from Miami, where Mrs. Brewster is remaining several days longer; the Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, Senator Arthur Capper, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. William Doak, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones, Judge and Mrs. Ernest van Fossan (she wore a black silk frock embroidered with flowers, which also trimmed her black hat), Mr. Jack Howard, Justice and Mrs. Dickinson Letts and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mandeville.

Society Women Aid Traffic Drive

Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Banister Co-operate in Radio Safety Talks.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Blair Banister and several other members of Washington society who are co-operating in the work of the Women's Safety Committee, of which Mrs. George Thorpe is president, are taking part in the series of Tuesday afternoon radio programs on safety which Mrs. Thorpe has inaugurated. The broadcasts are over Station WMAL at 5:45, and are given through the generosity of Mr. Oscar Coolican.

Mrs. Thorpe, who is also safety counselor for the community centers, will talk tomorrow on "The Man on Foot." Next week, she will conduct a discussion with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen on "Parking and Its Relation to Safety." Other programs will be her discussion with Mr. Coolican on "The Automobile and Its Promotion of Safety;" with Mrs. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and Capt. Rhoda Milliken, on "The European Traffic Problem;" with Maj. Ernest Brown on the "Causes of 1937 Fatalities;" with Mrs. Banister and Mr. William Van Duzer, on "Traffic Problems in the District;" with Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, director of community centers, on "The Child in Traffic."

Subjects of Mrs. Thorpe's talks concluding the series of nine broadcasts will be "The Youthful Driver" and "Two Jokers in the Pack—Speed and Liquor."

The Women's Safety Committee is having its luncheon meeting at the Sulgrave Club on Wednesday, with Donna Matilde de Suvich and Frau Scholz as guests of honor. Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, who also was to have been an honor guest, has canceled all social engagements because of mourning for the mother of the minister.

Miss Davis' Wedding Set Tomorrow

Daughter of Envoy-at-Large, R. W. Stuart Will Marry.

Ceremony Date Advanced Due to Departure of Family.

Mr. Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, and Mrs. Davis, of New York City and Washington, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Christine Paschall Davis, to Mr. Robert W. Whiton Stuart, of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whiton Stuart, of Princeton, N. J.

The marriage will take place tomorrow afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Elmore McKee will perform the ceremony in the presence of close friends and relatives, and a small reception will follow.

The wedding originally was planned to take place later in the spring, but Mr. and Mrs. Davis are sailing Wednesday for London, where the former will head the United States delegation to the sugar conference, so the date of the marriage was advanced.

The prospective bride was graduated from Milton Academy, Milton, Mass., and attended Vassar College. Later she was graduated as a trained nurse from the Presbyterian Hospital of the Medical Center in New York. Mr. Stuart, who is in the contracting business in New York, studied on the continent and was graduated from Cambridge University in England.

As Ambassador at Large, Mr. Davis has a roving commission in Europe.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Man Shopper.

"Now, since you're along, I'm just going to give you an example of how a man buys a suit. None of this dilly-dallying . . . running to this store and that and fooling around . . . and trying on a whole lot of things . . . and falling for some clerk's line of salve.

"Now I want you to watch the way I do. I just go into a store and tell 'em what I wa. . and they bring it and that's that. After all, I always say one dress or one suit is as good as another in the long run. It's just all in knowing what you want——

"I'd like to look at something in suits, please. Navy blue serge, size 42 . . . No! No! I don't want any Shetland plaids! . . . No! No stripes! . . . No, nothing but blue serge.

"If that fellow thinks he can sell me any of those loud plaids he's just off his bean. He'll find out he's not dealing with a woman. You see their trick is to sell you something different so you'll get tired of it. That is if you're easy——

"No, no, it's no use for me to try on anything but the navy blue . . . What? . . . They aren't? . . . Well I always wear what I please. I'm not like a woman. What? . . . They are? . . . Oh well all right, bring along the one with the pin stripes if you want to. I might slip on the coat.

• • • •

"Well, what do you think of this? . . . You don't think the stripes are too pronounced? . . . You know what he says? He says these worsteds don't get shiny like the serges. He says there's so few serges being sold they don't give the values . . . He thinks this is a mighty good value for the money—only $34.75. It's a genuine Napoleon—see it's here on the label—he thinks these stripes make me look taller.

"What? . . . No! No! I wouldn't look at anything more expensive. . . . No, I won't pay a cent more than $35 . . . What? . . . Two pairs of trousers? How much? . . . $47.50! No! No! That's too much! Besides, it's a plaid . . . Yes I know it's subdued but I never . . . What? . . . Younger? . . . Oh I don't care anything about that . . . Oh well, all right, I'll slip on the coat if that's all you want.

"Well, how do you like it? . . . As well as the stripes? . . . Which do you think makes my stomach look smaller, this or the stripes? . . . You know what he says? He says this is all hand loomed . . . it's a genuine Tarzan—see here's the label—and you get two pairs of trousers. He says if he was actually choosing himself between the two suits, he'd take this one——

"What! . . . No, no, I wouldn't go a cent higher . . . Double twist? . . . You really think they wear longer . . . What! $59.50! That's too much money! For that loud plaid! . . . What! . . . Well I don't care a hang what the British wear . . . Oh, well, all right then, I'll slip on the coat but I can tell you right now it won't do any good.

• • • •

"Well, how does this strike you? . . . Tell me honestly, do you think it looks very loud? . . . You know what he says? He says these bold plaids really make my stomach look flatter . . . because they make the shoulders look broader. He says if I got a conservative tie——say you don't like it very well, do you? . . . Now don't be t about the bush, tell me the truth . . . Yes, I know, but he says this is a much better value than the subdued plaid . . . it's a genuine Mussolini—see here's the label—and all the buttons double sewed. Still—$59.75's a lot for a spring suit . . . especially a plaid——

"What? . . . Down from $64.50! . . . Is that so? . . . Well, I might think it over . . . What? . . . The only one in that size? . . . You would? . . . You really think it's the best value? . . . They are? . . . Next spring? . . . You're sure of that? . . . Well, I guess then maybe——Oh, all right, I'll take it.

• • • •

'Say, you know that was an unusually intelligent fellow who waited on us. You know what he said to me? He said I was the easiest customer to fit he'd ever waited on! Yes, he said I had a build that could wear any type of suit!

Furs, Particularly Silver Fox. Add Regal Touch for Easter

Elegance, Femininity and Coronation Influences Noted in Spring Style Preview; Scarfs of Mink and Sable in Demand.

The Post's Fashion Editor, who recently studied spring styles at their New York sources, is giving Washington women practical advice on their spring wardrobes in a series of artciles. Today she discusses furs for the suit and collarless coat.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

A regal touch for your suit or collarless coat for Easter—a twin silver fox scarf! With elegance, femininity and the coronation influences pervading the spring fashion scene, it is not surprising that furs should return to vogue. Furs of all varieties, made into capes, scarfs and coats, add perfection to any ensemble, and do wonderful things for a simple suit or frock.

Novel manipulation of skins, simplicity and unique styling, feature the fur interpretations for spring. A new and clever idea for the rich-looking silver fox scarf is a treatment of the skins, so that a single skin has the appearance of two; this is done by a special swirling method. For kolinsky, sable, marten and other short-haired furs, there is a novel seven-way drape, which enhances the effect of the scarf, and makes it extremely versatile. If you can't afford sables, there are good-looking scarfs of marten dyed in rich dark mink and sable shades. These are especially smart to complement the popular tailored two-piece suit.

Capes Are Popular.

Fur capes for spring are usually made on rather straight lines, collarless and rounded over the shoulders. While the shoulders are broad, it is an implication, rather than an obvious shoulder detail. For narrow skins, the fur bands are generally worked vertically, rather than horizontally. An outstanding cape of mole, however, combines the two, using the skins vertically in the cape body and horizontally in the yoke. When collars are added, for either the short jackets or capes, they are small—the skins being twisted to form loops. The jackets, by the way, are short-sleeved and usually of the Eton or bolero types; some have tiny flared peplums.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

ALONG about the end of March our grandmothers used to rip their husbands and children out of their winter underwear and have a grand orgy of spring bathing. I am not sure but that staying in the clothes all winter was a good idea.

For some time I have been advising people who have sensitive and itchy skins, especially elderly people, not to bathe so much in the winter. Now that spring is here, however, you can plan for baths a little more frequently, even with my approval.

There are several kinds of baths, and they do much more than achieve mere cleanliness. The ancient Roman and the modern Japanese spent a good deal of time in a steaming hot bath, especially before the evening meal. They made a social event of it, and bathed with their friends and discussed the topics of the day. A bath is a stimulant and circulatory tonc, as well as a tonic to the skin and nervous system.

The morning bath is for a hectic day ahead. We should take the kind of a morning bath that removes every ounce of sluggishness. For this reason, and also because few of us can dally in the morning, the bath should be a quick one, using moderately hot water so that the soap will lather generously. Follow the washing with a fast, cool splash and dry briskly. Your circulation will be speeded up, your body will tingle, and you will be ready to face the day's problems with vigor.

A cold bath is all right for the fellow who intends to spend the rest of the day boasting about it. If a cold bath does not produce a glowing sensation of well being, you had better leave it alone.

The pre-dinner bath, which is one of the best of all, should be hot. Not a shower, but tub. Slow lathering and a long soaking period of rest until the body is relaxed, as well as clean—this should be the ritual for the weary. There are very few things that a hot bath won't cure.

This rest bath should be as unhurried as possible, especially if nervous fatigue is to be overcome. If there is time to lie down for a half-hour before dressing for dinner, it will be much more effective.

The bedtime bath should be neither hot nor cold; either extreme is likely to be weakening rather than soothing. The water should be about skin temperature or a little warmer. A tub bath is better than a shower at bed time. Remove the accumulation of grime, oil and perspiration, dead cells and bacteria on your skin, but do not take a strenuous rub-down after such a bath. Blot up the moisture in a leisurely fashion, and so to bed between clean sheets.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

For Six Years Woman Has Tried in Vain to Land Job on Newspaper; Why the Failure? She Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Have I a nice, big, juicy love problem to solve? No, sorry. Life isn't worth living without a love problem, do I hear you say? Sorry, no such problem today. But I have another problem. Since 1929 I have had pretty thorough training and experience in newspaper work. I had a college journalistic course, but I found editors laughed at this. Only experience counts, they told me. So I piled up some experience, hoping to prepare myself for a niche somewhere, some day, in journalism. And now I can't find that niche.

• • • •

I have worked on dailies for nothing. I have worked on small weeklies for small salaries. I have done free lance work. I wrote society for a slick paper publication covering an exclusive summer-and-winter resort. I edited and published a small resort paper myself. I have written feature articles for Washington papers at space rates. I did such work for a Washington correspondent's office. Once I had an opportunity to "work into a place" on a woman's page of a Washington newspaper. But I just couldn't afford to work on a free lance basis any longer, so I accepted a good paying job in another line.

• • • •

My experience has fitter me, I feel, for a salaried job on a good newspaper, and yet I cannot find any such contacts. I came here in 1931. I made the rounds of all the newspapers and press associations. They all told me the same thing: "Sorry, but we are reducing our force. We can't possibly take on anyone now." This, without giving me a hearing as to my ability or experience. Editors in their hurry would not even look at my work. It was just "Shoo, fly; you bother me."

• • • •

Now, although I was invariably told there would be no openings, that there was no use leaving an application, I notice there have been numerous changes in the staffs of all the papers since 1931. How can I solve my problem, Miss Haworth? I am particularly interested in interviews for feature articles. It may seem incredible from a person who has not actually found a place for herself all these years, but I have on my list of interviewees Ethel Barrymore, Lawrence Tibbet, W. Hendrick Van Loon, Amelia Earhart, Charles Lindbergh (a general press-box pow-wow) Gar Wood and numerous other interesting persons.

• • • •

I am also interested in column stuff. I've done articles on child psychology. And I'd be interested in the kind of column you do. I'd enjoy interviewing various authorities for replies to the flow of questions. I have been nearly seven years gaining experience for journalistic work and so far it has been impossible for me to find a newspaper job at a livable salary. Please, what is the answer?

FOURTH ESTATE SOB SISTER.

Things to Consider.

DEAR SOB SISTER: The answer, I have no doubt, is unprepossessing personality and appearance. For some years now psychologists have been attempting to drive home the fact that magnetic, persuasive personality and good appearance are at least 85 per cent responsible for the average individual's success in business or the professions. Few managing editors or departmental employers in any field of work are likely to give much consideration to a job-seeker's potential efficiency unless they are first favorably impressed by the applicant's personal appearance and manner of approach. This is particularly true when the job-seeker is a woman and the potential employer is a man. Though he might make some charitable allowance for carelessness of dress or idiosyncrasy of manner in another man, he simply will not tolerate these attributes in a woman.

• • • •

Don't make the mistake of believing that simpering, gushing, eyelash fluttering, coyness, whimsicality, exaggerated hesitancy or demureness, or even the go-getter attitude are methods of registering "personality" in a business interview. Personality is a genuine, forthright quality. It has to do with the suggestion of physical vitality. It registers in one's manner of walking, of speaking, of rising up and sitting down: in a sort of easy, graceful inconspicuous adaptability to environment. It registers, too, in a sort of unity between dress, type and situation.

• • • •

A woman looking for a job should assemble a job-hunting outfit with all the care she would give to her bridal array. If she doesn't know how to dress to enhance her type she should consult a professional stylist. She should wear simple, smart, dark, preferably tailored things. Her hair, nails and complexion should be as carefully cared for as though she were about to pose for a photograph. Her manner should be direct, pleasant, unaffected and thoroughly businesslike. She should let the potential employer do most of the talking, and at the slightest signal that he has no more to say she should terminate the interview. Nothing makes a worse impression on a might-be boss than an applicant who hangs on and on.

In making her entrance and her exit she should give the impression that she is definitely "pulled together," so to speak; of knowing who she is, where she is going and what she is about. I have seen too many newspaper job hunters who might almost be taken for amnesia victims at first sight. They come straying in with a sort of aimless, "Where am I and whom do I wish to see?" aspect. The other extreme of this, equally dismaying, is the type who very evidently proposes to carry all before her. Consciously registering dynamic purpose and personality, she demands to speak to So-andso (it may be the publisher; the managing editor; or some department head) and if the interview is granted, she declaims that it is her life's ambition to work on his paper; that she will not take "no" for an answer, etc., etc. Others fail to make the grade by not knowing the specific thing they wish to do, can do or would be willing to do. Still others weaken their chances by telling grandiosely of their columnar aspirations and qualifications.

One of the most effective methods of getting a newspaper job—believe it or not—is by writing a first-class letter of application and citing a few acceptable references. On a second sheet, clipped to the letter, one may submit one's experience in chronological order, citing term of experience in each instance and reason for changing jobs. Such a letter should be devoid of whimsicality and verbosity (two faults I found to excess in your foregoing communication). Information should be delivered with a terse wallop; it should be brief and to the point, grammatically well constructed, with words properly spelled. (In your letter you misspelled the names of both Lindbergh and Earhart.) If you have acceptable writing style that fact will be conveyed to the trained newspaper eye on and between the lines of your letter. It has been said, you know, that a good reporter is recognized not by how much, but by how little he writes.

• • • •

In conclusion, I might tell you what a seasoned, successful newspaper man once told me. We were discussing the technique of jobgetting; whether or not a reporter should keep a scrapbook of his writings; how much experience and good references counted. He said, "The only sure-fire way to get a job is to be on hand when there is an opening. If the editor happens to like you he'll hire you. If he doesn't, he won't." Which would seem to substantiate the psychologists' argument that success in journalism is 85 per cent attributable to pleasing personality and good appearance — those things which make persons like you. PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HOW DID the wing chair get its wings? A lot of people have worried over that question these many years, and we've heard several theories. The one most generally agreed on, though, is that the wings sprouted on an armchair in the days when houses were very drafty Fireplaces were the only sources of heat then, and you know how they can roast your front and freeze your rear! Any way, the idea of wings to keep off drafts sounds logical.

We've retained that style in upholstered chairs because it's a graceful design and comfortable. Most rooms are better off for the presence of at least one wing chair, and sometimes a pair are pleasing. Again, it's interesting to upholster the outside of the chair in a material that contrasts to that on the inside of the chair. Or only the cushions can be in a contrasting fabric. In other cases, a plain material all over the chair with a contrasting moss fringe is smart. Some of the new quilted materials are very effective for covering wing chairs, as are the washable leathers that come in such delicious colorings.

The trend right now in upholstered furniture seems to be toward monotone effects and play upon different tones of the same color. That means lots of plain materials, and many of the neutrals that have a pinkish cast.

These shades are all flattering to a wing chair because its graceful lines are thereby accented and looked to for part of the pattern of the room.

Not So Prim as It Seems

This dress of 1847 worn by Katharine Hepburn in the play "Jane Eyre," really reveals as much as it conceals, contends Miss Hepburn. She says clothes of that era "fired men's imagination."

Katharine Hepburn Says Girls Of Jane Eyre Era Packed Appeal

Star Doubts if Tight-Corseted and Prudish Women of 90 Years Ago Merit Sympathy Offered by Little Gowned Sisters of Today.

THE "POOR GIRLS" of Jane Eyre's day: How could they stand to wear those tight corsets and prudish dresses? And conceal their charms by muffling themselves from neck to toes?

Women audiences have been asking these questions ever since dramatization of Charlotte Bronte's novel started its triumphal tour. But according to Katharine Hepburn, star of the play, much of this sympathy for the clothes inhibited girls of the 1840's is wasted.

Miss Hepburn, who arrived here yesterday for the opening of the play tonight, maintains the women of Jane Eyre's era were not so slow after all in the matter of clothes and sex appeal. She insists the dresses of 90 years ago "teased" the men of that day more than do "any of the extreme decolletes of today."

"That was because women's clothes held a promise of allurement whether it was actually there or not," she said. "Because dresses so completely concealed feminine charms, they were far more arousing than our forthright gowns of today. The sight of a woman's pretty ankle under a skirt excited the swains of Jane Eyre's day to nothing less than ecstatic rhapsodies and burning sonnets."

Happy in Stays.

Moreover, Miss Heyburn finds that the confining costumes of the past (and here she speaks not only out of her experience as Jane Eyre, but as Jo March, Mary of Scotland and other earlier heroines) were not so difficult to wear after all.

"It is true they are not so easy to manage as a pair of slacks or a tailored suit of modish length," she said. "But management of clothes is entirely a matter of becoming accustomed to them. In the old days I think that women felt no more hampered by their long dresses and their series of petticoats than we do in the latest models of evening dresses.

"Naturally it seems difficult to believe that women did not suffer in the high steel corsets of that period; but since they were the style, women wore them regardless and thus feeling smart and well groomed they were similarly regardless of discomforts produced."

The clothes worn by Miss Hepburn were designed by Lee Simonson and are historically true in fabric and style to the period in which the Bronte's lived. In this era prudishness in faminine dress was reaching its height and giving birth to the Victorianism that dominated the latter half of the nineteenth century.

Illustrating the spirit of the age, Miss Hepburn cited a story of Charlotte Bronte's time, which she says is on "newspaper record," of a socially prominent young girl who appeared at the dinner table with the neck of her new gown cut in the very faintest suggestion of a V. At the sight of such immodesty, her father lifted his plate of soup and dashed it at her offending V-neck, ruining the gown.

Yet, despite this primness of dress, many of the style features of 1847 are appearing in the present spring styles of 1937, including the tight velvet bodice worn by Miss Hepburn, and her lace fichu. Also, Miss Hepburn's hair dress in the play is suggestive of the halo roll of today with curls at the back.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 21.

WITH a gusty sigh of relief and exhaustion I hail the end of the spring fashion show orgy, which afflicts us with brain-sprain and spots before the eyes each year at this time. For weeks I have been peering at new clothes, and as soon as I have reviewed the Easter Parade I can relax briefly.

ALICE HUGHES.

Most of the fashion shows are conventional and routine, but now and then an extra-smart seamstress pulls a fast one in the way of novelty. Such was the exhibit last week of Elizabeth Hawes, who is a very clever and hoity-toity couturier, indeed, with a lush four-story salon on the upper East Side. She not only corralled the loveliest professional clothes-horses in town and rallied a very social and artistic audience, but showed her new models in conjunction with men's duds made by the local tailoring firm presided over by "Tony" Williams, who married Peggy LeBoutillier, one of the town's favorite girls.

• • • •

Among the amateur models who wore the clothes were John Anderson, dramatic critic; Frank Chapman, Gladys Swarthout's husband; Lucius Beebe (in a plum-colored evening suit), columnist and bon vivant; Mrs. Julien Levy, and Peggy and Tony themselves. Every outfit had a name. Some of them were "Moral Turpitude," "Heart Balm," "Heir Apparent," "Alimony," and "Conjugal Rights." And Hawes broke a precedent by having two brilliant rivals at her show—Muriel King, in pink and red of her own creation, and the exotic Russian, Valentina, in flowing black chiffon and an aureole-like headdress which gave her the look of a startled saint.

• • • •

A fancy audience, different clothes and much good food and drink made it an unusual exhibition. For me, however, the high spot was a young man who tried to walk through the show-window, thinking it a door. Miraculously, he only got a cut finger, and was able to enter and behold the loveliest gals in town!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Hollywood still fails to snatch quite all our loveliest mannequins. By all odds the most fetching lass at the Hawes show was the ace model, Rosemary Carver, whose hair was a mass of small bronze curls, into which she had stuck a couple of dozen tiny flowers. Did she look cayute! The men folks had her completely surrounded all evening.

• • • •

Our White Russians always seem to have a pretty durn good time, but they enjoy themselves most when they can have a big society wedding at the Greek Orthodox Church here and celebrate it with all the old-time trimmings. Such were the nuptials of Princess Dolly Obolensky and Hans Spitzer the other day—everybody carrying candles and grinning broadly. Dolly broke the family tradition—that every Obolensky must marry a Troubetzkoy. Perhaps the fact that one of the Obolenskys, who married a Troubetzkoy a few years ago, leaped off the Eiffel Tower in Paris had something to do with it.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

In order to make a success in any kind of work, you've jest got to have a certain amount of confidence. But there ain't such a thing as havin' too much of it. Especially in show business.

There was a bass concert singer out here that had made quite a reputation for himself with his voice. One day, a big studio sent for him and they told him that they wanted a big chorus for a picture. He says "I can give you the biggest and best chorus that's ever been known in history." The studio executive says, 'Well, now what do you need in the line of singers?"

The singer says, "Well, I want about 4,000 tenors, 3,500 altos and 5,000 sopranos."

The executive says, "but how many thousand bassos will you need?"

The singer says, "Oh, you won't have to bother about gettin' any of them—I'm gonna sing bass myself!"

U.S. Warned Ideals Can't Save Liberty

We Must Defend It, De Madariaga Tells Shoreham Audience.

Ex-Spanish Envoy Says Freedom Faces Its Gravest Threat.

Salvador de Madariaga, former Spanish Ambassador to the United States, last night told a fashionable audience at the Town Hall of Washington meeting in the Shoreham Hotel that the fiery idealism of revolutionary forefathers was no guarantee of individual liberties today.

Declaring the position of liberty has never been more gravely threatened throughout the world than it is today, De Madariaga said: "A strange callousness has grown all over the world about liberty. Why are we so lacking in vigor and imagination to defend it? The real cause may lie in the fact that we have liberty in our brains but not in our hearts. We are thinkers about liberty, not believers in liberty."

Liberty, De Madariaga, added, cannot be inherited. "It will be taken from us like an old suit of clothes or a farm if we believe so," he warned. "Liberty must be in every generation."

Marxism and Fascism are both menaces to individual liberty, De Madariaga declared. "They are the tools of those who seek to govern by easy, lazy and quick methods," he asserted.

New Concept Urged.

"Are we to submit to loss of our liberty because of the difficulty of governing free men?" he asked.

Lovers of liberty, according to De Madariaga, must decide whether the individual was created for the nation or whether the nation was created for the individual.

"Christ, himself, and all other lovers of liberty since his time have felt that the nation was created for the individual," asserted De Madariaga.

A new concept of government in which the Nation is recognized as an organism is essential if peace is to come to the world, the Spanish statesman said. He pointed out that a new group, comprising statesmen and educators and known as "World Foundation" is being formed to spread that idea.

"The only way to get rid of violence is by revolution of the mind and heart," he asserted. "Violence will never end violence. The nation must be recognized as an organism which responds to a brain—and I don't mean a brain trust but an assemblage of the nation's ablest leaders.

"To remove violence from international affairs we must stop conceiving of the world as a collection of 63 brigands on national missions. We must see it as an organic system where an arm does not attempt to abuse a leg."

Silent on Civil War.

Starting from the Crusades, De Madariaga denounced so-called high-minded missions undertaken by nations.

"There is no more dangerous buncombe in the museum of buncombe called history than that which is called national missions," he said.

"The mission of England, we are told, is to carry the white man's burden, but we know she carries it on the blackk man's shoulders."

He scoffed at the expression "the greatest happiness for the greatest number" as a maximum of nonsense in a minimum of words.

De Madariaga refused to answer questoins bearing on the Spanish civil war.

Science May Lose Pet Theory Because of Bug's Wing Print

The Smithsonian Institution yesterday had cause to cast a small shadow of doubt on the belief of scientists that for a period of 60,000,000 years the earth was practically without bugs.

From Colorado there has come to Washington a piece of limestone on which have been found two wing prints of some kind of bug. The limestone—and, of course, the wing prints—belongs to the Cretaceous period—the heretofore supposedly bugless era of 60,000,000 years.

Up until the moment these two wing prints were found, the situation for Cretaceous bugs had been gloomy, indeed. The institution couldn't explain it. There was a great redudance of bugs in the eras immediately preceding and following the Cretaceous, which was the heydey of the great dinosaurs.

But the Smithsonian couldn't find a single bug—fossil imprints of bugs, rather—in rocks of the Cretaceous period.

"It is," paleontologists of the Smithsonian said, "one of the great enigmas of paleontology."

The wing prints tentatively were identified yesterday by Paul W. Oman, of the Department of Agriculture. A "bug," in the terminology of the entomologist, has the restricted meaning of a "heteropterous hemiterous" insect—by which term you may correctly refer to bedbugs, chinch bugs and the like, the Smithsonian says.

For years scientists had been looking at cretaceous rocks and never found any bug fossils. Dinosaurs? They found plenty. But insects, no. What made it more baffling was that the Cretaceous age was ideal for insects—plenty of beasts and plants for bugs to dine on, era of "the abundant life" for an insect, but nary an insect there to enjoy it!

One of the bugs described by Oman was a giant leaf hopper. "It was bigger than the average size of this family now extant, and nearly as large as the largest," he said. The other, described from a smaller fragment of wing impression in the sandstone, "was probably closely related to the present-day squash bug and not very far distant from the bedbug or stink bug."

Whether the giant leaf hopper used "tobacco" like our present-day grasshoppers, the scientists could not determine. In fact, they were too happy to worry about it.

U. S. Sympathy Asked by Cleric In Reich 'Purge'

In return or Adolph Hitler's expression of sympathy for the families in Texas stricken by the catastrophic blast, the United States should ask the German dictator to convey the sympathy of America to the widows of those "ruthlessly slaughtered" in Germany, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris said last night in his sermon at Foundry Church.

Dr. Harris said:

"Dictator Hitler has sent official expression of sympathy to the United States for the stricken families in Texas, where a great catastrophe has brought an appalling slaughter of the innocents. That expression from the present head of the German government should, of course, be politely acknowledged.

"In return, the United States should request Herr Hitler to convey the sympathy of free America to the widows and other relatives of the families of those ruthlessly murdered, some his close friends, in the so-called "purge," because he suspected them of not sharing 100 per cent his fanatical ideas.

"America, the land where the state cannot crucify conscience, ought also to ask Hitler to express our sympathy to the anguished families of Christian ministers in Germany who have been shamefully flung into concentration camps, where some have died for their faith because they would not betray their Lord and bow down to Caesar. Surely, there would be no protest at such sympathy being offered. There might be some question as to whether it would be delivered uncensored to the mourners of the Nazi Slaughter of Innocents.

"It is a pity that an outstanding man like Ambassador Luther, a scholar, a gentleman and a delightful companion, should be compelled to respond to cords pulled from Berlin by those who are decidedly his inferior in character and ability and international good manners."

Deadline Near In Fund Drive For Orchestra

With just two more days to go, the National Symphony Orchestra's supporters launched a final offensive yesterday to push the $110,000 sustaining fund drive over the goal line by Wednesday noon.

With $64,000, or 60 per cent, of the amount of the goal now contributed, workers and leaders decided yesterday on plans to bring the campaign to a successful finish when the deadline arrives at a luncheon Wednesday in the Hamilton Hotel.

All the division chairmen conferred on activities for the remaining days of the drive at a special meeting yesterday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, general campaign chairman. Hans Kindler, founder and conductor of the orchestra, warned that his organization may not be able to go on unless the full amount of the goal is realized.

Cheers of more than 4,000 youngsters at the National Symphony's final students' concert in Constitution Hall Saturday morning spurred workers to new activity, leaders reported yesterday.

"The value of such concerts as the orchestra gave our young music lovers Saturday is self-evident," said Mrs. Howe. "Here we have thousands of boys and girls in our city already 'sold' on music. Anyone who attends Dr. Kindler's student concerts cannot escape the conviction that he draws them into a real interest in music. Now, our job is to make it possible for Dr. Kindler to hold that attention—to the end that the concertgoers of tomorrow will be musi- enthusiasts because they genuinely enjoy the masterpieces."

Dr. Kindler has placed special emphasis on the concerts for children since the campaign for next year's sustaining fund opened. Reminded that student concerts have been an integral part of the National Symphony's seasons ever since its inception in 1931, Dr. Kindler replied: "They are done 'successfully,' yes—but on a perpetual shoestring."

The concert in Constitution Hall Saturday was the last of 10 student concerts in the 1936-37 season. The previous nine were played in high school auditoriums at Central, Eastern and Western.

The orchestra has two more regular concerts in Constitution Hall before the current season ends. Next Sunday afternoon Dr. Kindler concludes the popular Sunday afternoon series of concerts with an Easter program featuring request numbers. The final concert of the mid-week series and of the season in Washington will be given the afternoon of March 31.

Special Palm Sunday Services Mark Beginning of Holy Week

Christians of Washington yesterday celebrated the most happy of pre-Easter holidays, the anniversary of the day their Master made his triumphal way into Jerusalem.

Catholic and Protestant joined in the observance of Palm Sunday, expressing in song and sermon their joy over the acclaim that came to their Leader on that Sunday so many centuries ago.

At the same time the day had its somber side, for it marked the beginning of Holy Week, described in one sermon yesterday as "the most revolutionary week in all history."

"Christ with complete understanding deliberately marched into this tragic week," said the Rev. Ernest C. Mobley, evangelist, in a sermon in Columbia Heights Christian Church.

Rites Began Early.

Special religious rites yesterday began early. In Catholic churches there were early masses, while Episcopal parishes joined in early Holy Communion celebrations.

Later there were services of the Blessing of the Palms, and after services of solemn mass and morning prayer these palms, symbolic of Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, were distributed among the worshipers.

Music played a colorful part in yesterday's rites, as choirs and soloists opened the series of special presentations they will give through Holy Week. The traditional selections, "The Palms" and "Hosanna," appeared on scores of programs throughout the Capital.

In the absence of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, services in Washington Cathedral yesterday were in charge of Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, who preached at both the 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services.

Dr. Mobley, in his sermon at Columbia Heights, delivered a warning that only by passing "through the shadows of the cross" can the modern world reach "God's perfect light."

Christ Had Counted Cost.

"On that bright, crisp Sunday morning He was conscious that the gold palm leaves were sprinkled with heavy shadows—these were the long shadows of the magic cross of Calvary. Slowly the Christ was riding into a black human inferno. He had carefully counted the cost and was set to the task of seeing it through.

"When the world leaders can learn to humbly go the way of the cross, then it is that they can clearly visualize the future and be able to see through. The only way out of this dense darkness is by way of the cross.

"The only method of spanning the deep valley is by the light of Calvary. Socrates came in his philosophy to stand in the dark hour and drink hemlock with a steady hand. Christ was able to see through Holy Week, and by this philosophy stand in the black shadows of Calvary and taste of death for every man.

"Christ wore the rainbow of hope forever about His head, and in his eyes He carried God's lantern of perfect light. Socrates died like a philosopher, but Jesus Christ died like a God."

At Luther Place Memorial Church, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor, told his congregation that the world, today as always, must make "its choice between God and the prince of this world."

"Men chose between Caesar and Christ," he declared. In our day we see whole nations turning their backs against the gentle figure who stands at the door and waits for admission. But if history says anything it confirms the observation made long ago by the Psalmist, 'Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.' Christ and His cause live on from age to age. It is nations that come and go."

The Rev. John McDowell, D. D., associate general director of the department of social education and action of the board of Christian education, Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, preached the Palm Sunday message in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"There is no hope for the world apart from the Kingdom of God, and no hope for the Kingdom of God apart from the church, and no hope for the church apart from the men and women who are dominated by the spirit and ideals of the Kingdom of God," Dr. McDowell declared.

Opportunity Is Today.

"If ever Christianity had its chance, it is today. The present national and international conditions are demonstrating conclusively that human resources at their best are unequal to the demands of this tragic and bewildering hour. We see more clearly than ever that with all our getting and planning, our doing and striving, we are never really happy, even in our palmy days of prosperity.

"It is evident that we have turned aside from the paths of joy, for everywhere discontented, weary faces tell the tale. Selfishness has borne its unfailing harvest of grief, wrong and injustice."

Rome Celebrates Day.

Rome, March 21 (AP).—Fresh green palm leaves and spring-time sprigs of olive branches inundated Rome today as Catholics celebrated Palm Sunday, the anniversary of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

In Vatican City, Pope Pius received a special palm from the Bresca family, of San Remo, which has held the special privilege of making this gift for almost three centuries.

The Camaldoli order also sent ornately decorated palm branches, which Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretaary of state, received in the name of the pontiff.

The Pope himself kept to his apartment, preparing for the round of solemnities with which the church observes Holy Week.

Cardinal Pacelli celebrated a special Palm Sunday mass at St. Peter's, attended by numerous cardinals and a throng of worshipers.

U. S. to Rush Final Details Of New Bank

Extra Help Promised in Transformation of Fidelity Loan.

Court to Get Plan for Preserving Assets of Concern.

Extra help will be rushed into action to complete final details of the transformation of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association into the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington, two Government agencies promised yesterday.

Meanwhile, Treasury lawyers were preparing to go before the United States District Court here to ask approval of a plan announced Saturday for preserving the assets of the closed bank and reopening it as a going institution. No court objection to the plan is anticipated.

Considerable work in establishing the new bank will require the efforts of numerous extra workers from the Treasury and from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. The new institution will be under the supervision of FHLB, which first proposed the plan of reorganization.

About 3,000 shareholders who have not yet filed proof of their claims against the closed bank undoubtedly will be heard from within the next few days, James H. Nolan, receiver, said last night. To date about 16,000 have filed their claims.

Under the plan, as announced by William Prentiss, jr., acting Comptroller of the Currency, shareholders will swap their shares in Fidelity for shares in the new bank, taking a 15 per cent loss. If shareholders want cash, they may sell their new certificates immediately.

Considerable surprise was expressed in banking circles yesterday that Fidelity was able to pay 85 cents on the dollar. It was explained at the Treasury that improvements in the real estate and mortgage field during the past nine months since the bank was closed had elevated the value of the assets. The assets, it was further explained, are worth considerably more if preserved than if disposed of at quick sale.

Meeting Opposes 2 A. M. Beer Sale

A firm stand against liberalization of Montgomery County liquor laws was taken last night at a mass meeting held under auspices of the Ministerial Union of the county. Bills now pending in the State Legislature, which would permit the sale of beer until 2 a. m. were opposed.

The other resolution approving legislation which would reduce the county handling charge on case beer, and which would classify as "light" all wines containing less than 20 per cent alcohol, also were opposed.

The meeting, held to acquaint the Montgomery County representatives to the State Legislature with the "dry side" of the liquor question, was presided over by the Rev. Raymond H. Brown.

William E. Evans, Steel Leader, Dies

Huntington, W. Va., March 21 (AP). William E. Evans, 73, widely known in the steel industry and personal friend of Andrew Carnegie and Charles M. Schwab, died today after a long illness.

A Welshman by birth, he came to the United States in 1875, when 11 years old. He went to work in a Virginia steel mill as a puddler and later worked in mills at Pittsburgh.

He originated the bright steel annealing process used in the steel industry.

Evans retired a year ago as annealing supervisor for the Thomas Steel Co., Warren, Ohio. Funeral services will be held Wednesday at Warren.

Hoover's G-Men Battle Allen's WPA for City Title Tonight

A. A. U. Final Tilt at Tech Is 'Natural'

Teams Seek Post Trophy; Aggies, Senate in Prelim.

Chief G-Man and Commissioner Expect to Attend.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The Washington basketball season ends with a flourish tonight at Tech High in the foremost independent game of the year, when the FBI forces of Mr. J. Edgar Hoover open fire on Commissioner George Allen's WPA leather shooters in the final round of the annual Washington Post tournament for the District A. A. U. unlimited championship.

Before the G-men attempt to solve the case of Mr. Allen's wizards, another city title struggle will take over the court. Gunning for the 145-pound class championship, Department of Agriculture tangles with the Heurich Senate Beermen at 8 p. m. The Hoover-Allen (Investigation-WPA) feud follows directly afterward.

Allen Confident.

More unrestrained than Hoover in his pregame comment is the Commissioner.

"We can beat Hoover any time," is the Allen comment. "All we want is a crack at them. They're good at catching kidnapers, but I'm afraid they'll catch something else in this game."

More moderate in his predictions, but quietly confident, J. Edgar Hoover says: "The FBI never discusses unfinished business. It prefers to do its talking concerning the basketball game tonight after the game is over."

Entirely unnecessary is it for the investigation chief to predict a result. Says he: "It is our firm belief that the result of this game will speak for itself."

For District WPA, canny Coach Dave Keppel early corraled three of the most promising, smoothest high school players that ever cavorted on a local court—Reds Scheible, Dope Dean and Chick Hollidge of Eastern High. With Ollie Tipton and Bernie Lucas, old-time veterans, this youthful trio has provided the punch which has elevated the Keppel crew to the high esteem not only of Commissioner Allen but the basketball public in general.

Reserves Are Stars.

The team's reserves, Catholic University's Bernie Lieb, George Washington's Bill Noonan, both Eastern products, and the experienced Ollie Mayfield could be playing possibly on many a professional team, so highly are they regarded in basketball circles.

Also good enough for many professional clubs, however, are the towering Federal Agents.

The brothers, Jimmy and Herb Thompson, of Duke; Glen Bethel, of McPherson's Oilers and Minnesota University; Joe Robinson, big, burly center from New York State; Bernie Jones of Roosevelt High; Tommy Lynch of Mount St. Mary's; Forrest Burgess, former George Washington captain; Nelson Colley of Duke, and Roger Leverton of the University of Richmond comprise the bulk of the G-man cast which has won 31 games in 34 starts this season.

Investigation and Commissioner Allen's men have met but once before this season, WPA winning by two points in the finals of the city-wide police tournament. In The Post classic, Investigation has averaged 57 points a game and WPA 51. More consistent, however, WPA hit under 50 points but once, when it eliminated the defending champions, George Washington's Freshmen, 48-41, in the semi-finals.

Yankees Beat Bees; Indians Bow to Giants

Detroit Drubs Red Sox, 5-2; Chisox, Cards Score; Browns Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21.—An eleventh-inning home run by Ernie (Chief) Koy, rookie outfielder, gave the New York Yankees their fourth victory of the "Grapefruit League" season over the Boston Bees, 6 to 5, today. The home run came with two out off the delivery of Ira Hutchinson.

The Yanks had tied the score with 2 runs in the ninth on singles by Selkirk, Johnson, Rolfe and Glenn after the Bees had nicked Johnny Broaca for three tallies in the fifth to take the lead.

Giants Beat Indians, 8-1.

Gulfport, Miss.—The New York Giants hammered out an 8-to-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians in an eight-inning exhibition game today as Hal Schumacher, Al Smith and Dick Coffman combined to limit the Tribe to six hits.

A 4-run blast in the second inning when Danning, Bartell, Chiczza and Ott made hits and Campbell muffed Joe Moore's short fly, and a 3-run rally in the eighth produced most of the runs. Johnny McCarthy drove in two of these with a triple and scored on a long fly. Campbell's three-bagger and Becker's grounder in the third scored the Cleveland run.

Reds Wallop Dodgers, 7-3.

Clearwater, Fla.—Bunching their hits off Max Butcher in three good innings, the Cincinnati Reds walloped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 3, in an exhibition game today.

Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto, Brooklyn second baseman secured last winter from Pittsburgh, injured his right ankle in the second inning when he caught his foot under the bag in covering second. Examination in the clubhouse indicated either a broken ankle or a torn ligament.

After being held to two hits in four innings by Van Mungo, the Reds hit Butcher hard to score five runs in the fifth and sixth. Spud Davis and Phil Weintraub hit homers.

Tigers Beat Red Sox, 5-2.

Lakeland, Fla.—Rookie Chester Wilburn smacked a double with the bases filled in the sixth inning.

Sun Radio Scores, 2-1, For 7th Soccer Crown

Heurich Booters Bow in Second Play-Off Game for Recreation League Title; Sherwood Upsets Park View, 1-0, in Cup Play Semifinal.

Senior soccer competition for this season closed yesterday, Sun Radio defeating Heurich's, 2-1, in the second and last game to decide the championship of the Playground Department's recreation League, Sun having won the first game by the same score. This is the seventh straight year that the title has been won by Ben Kail's boys from Rosedale playground.

In a preliminary game, Sherwood pulled a big surprise by defeating Park View, 1-0, in a local national junior cup semifinal, the winning point coming near the end of a second extra-time period.

The league game was not up to expectations, being rougher than necessary and both teams missing many opportunities of scoring. Heurich's being the worst offenders, at least two easy openings in the closing minutes being muffed, either one of which meant the equalizing goal. Although outclassed often in midfield play, the winners were the more dangerous near goal, most of the Heurich forwards preferring to maneuver for an opening—which seldom came—rather than attempt a direct shot.

There was lots of action, but not much soccer in the junior cup tie. Park View recently won the Playground 18-year-old championship and were favorites to beat Sherwood, but Joe Mitchell's lads met them toe to toe, surprised themselves when they kept Park View from scoring in the regulation periods, and then went on to register an upset. Sherwood was under its regular strength, which makes the victory sweeter. Park View failed to exhibit its usual teamwork and paid the penalty. Sherwood meets the winner of the Rosedale-Mitchell Brothers game in the local final, the Washington victor probably meeting the champions of Baltimore in the first interdivisional match.

An Anti-Italian Outburst Halts Soccer Game

Angered by Rough Tactics, Viennese Crowd Tears Down Italy's Flag.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 21.—A violent anti-Italian outburst by an Austrian football crowd today caused abrupt ending of an international soccer game and promised embarrassment for the Austrian government.

With Austria meeting Italy in an early round of play for the European soccer cup, the crowd of 40,000 which filled the Vienna stadium in spite of rain was vociferously anti-Italian from the outset.

Thousands took part in an anti-Italian demonstration punctuated by shouts of "Pfui Mussolini!" and "Down With Italy!"

The Italian flag was torn from the automobile in which the visiting team reached the grounds.

As the game went on the crowd grew incensed by what it considered rough play on the Italian side. Tension increased, and late in the second half, with the Austrians leading, 2 to 0, Referee Ohlson, a Swede, stopped the game.

Police said they had to protect the Italian team from angry crowds as they were taken back to their hotel in police cars.

Austrian officials indicated anxiety lest the incident have troublesome echoes.

Authoritative quarters believed the incident was a temporary outburst of anti-Italian sentiment which many Austrians have cherished since the World War.

Sports officials said the referee followed precedent set in similar situations in international soccer matches.

Picard, Ford Take $3,000 Links Play

Hines-Stuart Team Is Beaten, 4 and 3, in Best Ball Play Final.

Winner Gets $1,000 as Picard's Brilliant All-Round Play Wins.

By the Associated Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 21.—Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and his amateur partner, Frank Ford, of Charleston, S. C., scored a smashing 4 and 3 victory over Jimmy Hines and Mark Stuart to win the $3,000 amateur-professional best ball golf tournament today.

The winning pair finished the first 18 holes with a three up margin. Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., and Stuart, a New Yorker, took only one of the first three holes.

Hines took the fifth with a deuce and the eighth with an eagle 3, but Ford dropped an 8-footer on the ninth for a birdie 2. Two up at the turn the Picard-Ford pair picked up another hole on the back nine.

Picard went to the finals last year only to be defeated by the team of Gene Sarazen and Mally Reynolds. Frank Ford proved a perfect partner this year and Picard earned $1,000 of the $3,000 prize money. For reaching the finals, Hines pocketed $500. Both amateurs received handsome trophies.

Picard Is Brilliant.

The afternoon play was nearly a carbon copy of the morning's. Hines and his partners gained a hole by winning the second with birdies but Picard fired an eagle three on the fifth to again take a 3 up lead. Stuart found his stride and blasted a birdie 3 on the sixth to shave off a hole as both Picard and Ford were down in 4.

Shortly after the turn Picard began to work wonders with his putter. He holed long putts on the tenth for a par 4 and on the eleventh and twelfth greens for birdie 3's and wins, thereby taking a five-hole lead. Stuart prolonged the match by sinking a long putt from the edge of the fourteenth green but they halved the difficult next green to end the match, 4 and 3.

Today Picard was brilliant. His tee shots carried the greatest distance and his iron play was perfect.

Joe Conde Knocks Out Casanova for Crown

Mexico City, March 21 (AP).—Joe Conde knocked out Baby Casanova, the idol of Mexican fight fans, in one round last night, to win the Mexican lightweight championship.

Odds-on favorite in the bout at the Arena Mexico, Casanova never had a chance as Conde dropped him with a smashing right to the chin 2½ minutes after the fight started to regain his lightweight laurels.

2 District Stars to Play In Augusta Golf Today

Augusta, Ga., March 21 (AP).—A dozen of the Nation's better known feminine golfers will help a fast field begin competition in the seventh annual Augusta Women's Invitational Golf Tournament tomorrow, won last year by Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The tournament will feature Marion Miley, Jean Bauer, Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, Helen Hicks and Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, of Washington, D. C.

Salveson and Lewis Both Clout Homers

But Rookie Hurler Lets in as Many Runs as He Drives in; Travis Gets 3 Hits; Hogan Wins a Race; Play Bosox Today.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Tinker Field, Orlando, Fla., March 21.—With the arrival of spring today, the Nats' fancy turned to base hits and they assaulted three Philadelphia Phillies' pitchers in an uproarious demonstration that sent 15 runs across the plate—nine of 'em in the sixth inning.

The futile Phillies were here at Tinker Field, all right, but they were never in the ball game, as the saying goes. The Nats hauled off with four runs against their old pal, Bobby Burke, in the first inning and the scoreboard was soon sagging under the weight of the heavy numbers.

The upshot of it all was a 15-7 victory for the Nats, who splattered 19 base hits over the premises in their second victory in three Grapefruit League outings.

At this point, it may be well to mention something that should have been mentioned before. Four of those Washington runs in that hectic sixth when one Claude Passeau, the Phillies' pitcher, was showing great bravery under fire but little stuff on the ball, squirted from the bat of Jack Salveson, of all people.

A Homer, In Fact.

Salveson actually hit a homer with the bases full—a long line drive to center field—that served to restore the interest of the 1,000 natives who had transferred their attention from the game to the antics of Nick Altrock, who was mimicking the umpires and making a hit that didn't figure in the box score.

Despite his homer with the bases clogged, the bespectacled Salveson failed to drive in as many runs as he let in. For it was off him that the Phillies scored five of their seven runs and eight of their 13 hits—after Buck Newsom had yielded only five hits and two runs in a five-inning term of duty which stands as the longest period of pitching thus far attempted by a Washington hurler.

Burke, the left-hander who received an 11-year tryout with the Nats before it was educed that he wouldn't do, may have regarded his appearance at Tinker Field as a reunion with his ol' teammates, but the latter interpreted it as a home-coming. Four of 'em came home against Burke's pitching in that first inning.

Lewis, Travis on Spree.

Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis took advantage of the presence of the Phillies in town to up their grapefruit season batting averages by a whole mess of points. Each of 'em collected three hits and only Newsom and Mihalic failed to participate in the general thumping of the Phillies' hurlers.

After the Nats bounded into their 4-0 lead in the first inning, nothing really important happened except those nine runs in the sixth. To those who want the details of that merry-go-round:

Jess Hill led to right field, Lewis walked, Kuhel singled to left, Sington singled to center, Stone grounded to first and Lewis was out at the plate. Travis singled to center, Mihalic walked, Kuhel scored from third on a wild pitch, Shortstop Scharein muffed Millies' grounder, Salveson banged his home run with the bases full, Hill singled to left, and Buddy Lewis nudged a line-drive home run to right center, which may still be rolling.

Hugh Mulcahey, who pitched the last two innings for the Phillies and was the only hurler to hold the Nats' runless, failed in a tryout with Washington at Biloxi three years ago. He is regarded as the best young pitcher on the Phillies' staff.

Shanty Hogan won a foot race with Moore, of the Phillies, in the second inning, when he took a throw from Lewis and tagged out Moore in a sprint down the base line.

Buddy Myer's debut in the Nats' starting line-up was comforting to Manager Harris, who had been frankly worried over his star second baseman's failure to round into form. Myer singled in his first appearance at bat, drew a walk in his

Braddock Spurns Schmeling $350,000 Berlin Title Fight Offer

This Morning WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

ORLANDO, FLA.

At the headquarters of the Montreal Club across the street from the Nats' hotel here, a broad-shouldered fellow built on the general lines of a kiosk is yearning to be back in the big leagues. Sheriff Dave Harris will never understand why the big league managers permit him to stay in the minors.

POVICH.

From the watch chain across his expansive chest dangles the diamond-studded gold baseball they gave the sheriff as a member of the Nats' pennant-winning team of 1933, when he led all the pinch hitters in the American League. Dave fingers it fondly as he gives voice to his complaint against the baseball fates in typical Harris language:

"If they need three hunner't and fifty hitters, how they gonna overlook me? I can power that apple—always could. Ask Tommy Bridges and Lefty Grove. They couldn't get me out with a dynamite blast. I'm still pretty handy with that stick. Kinda makes me sore when I see a lotta punks (Dave started to say other punks) getting outfield jobs in the American League and them leaving me in the minors.

• • • •

"I can be had, cheap, too. Fact is, I haven't signed a contract yet with Montreal. Ain't gonna sign, either, till I get my price. I'm gonna hold out until they get sore and sell me to the big leagues, where I belong, don't I?

The Sheriff may or may not be in his proper niche in the baseball scheme, but it is noteworthy that, after all these years, he's a holdout. When he was with the Nats, Dave always found it hard to realize that he was actually being paid to play ball. The guy is so crazy about the game that there is a well-founded suspician he'd pay his way into the park just for the fun of playing.

• • • •

Other Washington ball players mulled over their contracts, held out for larger salaries, or procrastinated in singing—but Harris, never. He didn't quibble over salary. In fact, there is doubt that he even glanced at the salary figures. With Harris, like Hamlet, the play was the thing—not the pay.

• • • •

The late Ring Lardner, had he lived in the era of Dave Harris with the Nats, would have seen his Jack Keefe character come to life. The Sheriff was, in the opinion of the Sheriff, the greatest natural batter in baseball history, and the game's Lord High Executioner of the King's English.

• • • •

When he complained once of a slight stomach disorder at the Nats' Biloxi camp, the erudite Moe Berg diagnosed his trouble for him as "intestinal fortitude," advised the Sheriff to take to his bed immediately.

• • • •

The following morning Harris was up betimes as usual, stowed away a breakfast that would choke a hippo, and greeted Berg cheerily: "That intestinal fortitude gave me some trouble last night," he told Moe, "but I think I've got it licked."

In Short—

Proudest of Dave Harris' big league memories is the day in 1931 when he was sent in as a pinch-hitter at Detroit with two out in the ninth and Tommy Bridges, of the Tigers needing only one more out for a no-hit game. . . . Harris singled on the first pitch . . . the Sheriff is a turnkey in an Atlanta jail in the off-season . . . back in Greensboro, N. C., where he made a name for himself apprehending hoss thieves, the Sheriff was really only a deputy sheriff . . . he was presented with a new revolver by admiring home-town fans and the first time he took it out of its holster, the thing went off in his hands . . . as a sop to Dizzy Dean after he signed his 1937 contract for $25,000. Owner Sam Breadon gave Dizzy $500 in cash outright, just to show his appreciation. . . . Daffy Dean's voluntary retirement last season is apparent in his appearance this year . . . he has taken on, conservatively, 30 pounds, and now has the biggest pair of legs in baseball. . . . Johnny Mihalic, whose defensive play recommends him for a utility infield job with the Nats, made five errars on the day he broke in with Chattanooga at second base. . . . Jack Russell, released by the Red Sox, will apply for a pitching job with the Nats if he fails to connect with the Tigers . . . in the event the Nats deal of last season, will be a complete washout for the Red Sox . . . who gave up Cascarella and $7,000 in exchange for Russell last June.

Rutherfurd Wins Outboard Trophy

Miami, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Jack Rutherfurd, of New York, sent his Baby Juno roaring to victory today in a dogfight for the Wanamaker Trophy that featured the finish of the twenty-fourth annual Biscayne Bay regatta.

Rutherfurd narrowly avoided disaster in a scramble at the start, sideswiped another boat, and still the Baby Juno, a small hole in her hull, won out. At the start the Madoshumi V edged Rutherfurd to the inside and almost head-on into Miss Florida, coming inside to round the opening buoy. The careening Baby Juno just nicked the other craft, and continued on although forced almost a quarter mile off the course.

The heated Wanamaker Trophy rivalry stole the show from 60-year-old Jack Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., who won the 225-cubic-inch hydroplane race and bettered the world record, but not sufficiently to be credited with it.

Loder Makes Debut Here in Arcelli Bout Tonight

Furr Slated To Box Main Bout; Retired

German-American Welter Beat Such as Zoda, Mecadon and Jadick.

By Bill McCormick.

Teddy Loder, a 25-year-old German-American welterweight, will make his fistic debut in the Nation's Capital at Turner's Arena tonight in a scheduled eight-round feature against Werther Arcelli.

Arcelli is the rugged veteran who knocked out Sid Silas in the same ring a few weeks back.

Arcelli was originally slated to meet Phil Furr, but Philbert took a peek at Arcelli stopping Silas in three rounds and decided to return to his chosen occupation of plastering. The fact that it took Furr nine rounds more to put the snore in Sidney than Werther required may have had something to do with Philbert's hasty retirement from the squared circle.

Loder was developed by Joe Jacobs, the manager whose rubber cigar has adorned many prominent fighters' corners. Jacobs still pulls the strings on Teddy, but only by proxy. Most of La Jacobs' time is taken up by managing Herr Max Schmeling, who is a heavyweight in case you haven't heard.

Beat Mecadon.

Loder has beaten such as Jay Mecadon, who twice whipped Furr; Meyer Rowan, a colored sensation in Washington; Johnny Jadick, who also has beaten Furr; Billy McMahon, Joey Ferrando, Young Joe Firpo, oJey Zoda, Jackie Davis and Joe Pennino. Loder stopped Pennino, who is somewhat of a seven-day wonder around New York clubs at the present.

If Furr sticks to his threat—or would it be promise?—to stay in retirement, tonight's bout may have an important bearing on the District welterweight championship, which will be left officially vacant if Furr keeps his mittens nailed to the wall.

Almost of equal importance is the scheduled eight-round semifinal, which Nick Camarata, Chris Dundee's contender for the featherweight diadem, will tussle with Doug Swetnam, a local product.

Camarata has the distinction of holding Featherweight Champion Pete Sarron to a draw just before Petey departed for South Africa to become there almost as sensational as the Kimberly diamond mines.

Swetnam was for many years just another good featherweight. Of late he has developed into a very fine featherweight. Because of his improvement, he already is being mentioned as a possible opponent for Ray Ingram, the District's current No. 1 ring hero.

Four four-rounders will round out the bill. Frankie DeAngelo, the local veteran who is anxious to get back into the main event picture, will tackle Joe Leto, a good opponent from Baltimore.

Steamboat Bill Robinson, Alexandria's rough and tumble welterweight, will take on Sam Bacala, of Baltimore; Joe (Palooka) Mathews, from Richmond, will do battle with Bill Temes, of Washington, in a lightweight bout and Norman Cohen and Young Tony Ross, a couple of welterweights, will raise the curtain.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (the best) to G (heigh-ho, the merry-o).

MAIN EVENT—Teddy Loder, New York, vs. Werther Arcelli, Boston, welterweights; 8 rounds. Rated B. This one cannot fail to set a swift pace, as both are club fighters and both can punch. Loder should win, but he is no sure thing.

SEMIFINAL—Nick Camarata, New Orleans, vs. Doug Swetnam, Washington; featherweights; 8 rounds. Rated B. This is another that should panic the customers. Camarata always turns in a good fight, and you know all about Dougie of late. Camarata, but he is no cinch, either.

PRELIMINARIES — Frankie DeAngelo, Washington, vs. Joe Leto, Baltimore, featherweights; 4 rounds. Rated C. Frankie always was good, but seldom was in condition in the old days. He's serious now and should take Leto.

Joe (Palooka) Mathews, Richmond, vs. Bill Temes, Washington, lightweights; 4 rounds. Rated C. This is a tough fight for the Palooka, but he should win.

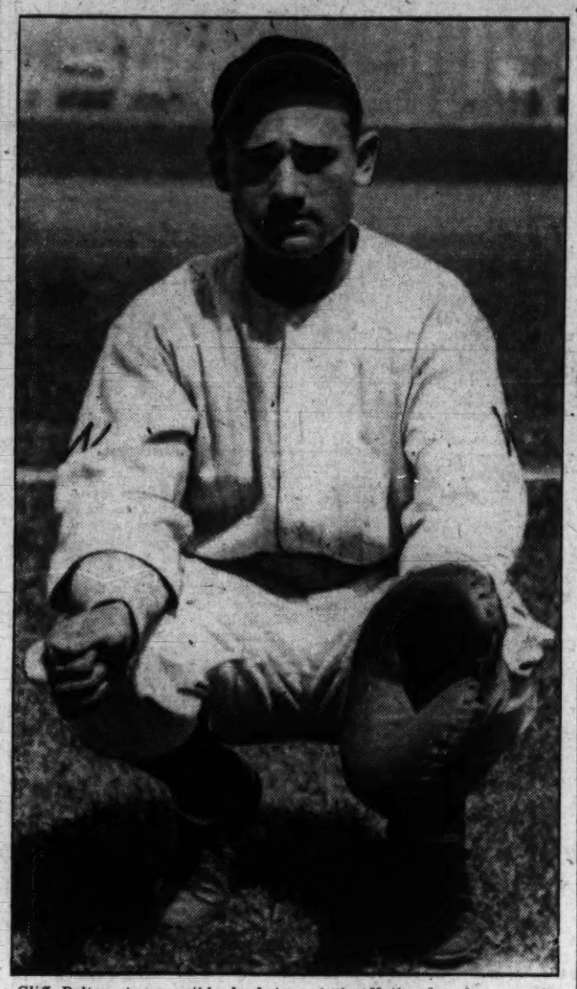
Sam Bacala, Baltimore, vs. Bill Robinson, Alexandria, welterweights; 4 rounds. Rated C. Bacala hasn't been going so well of late. He should lose here.

Norman Cohen, Richmond, vs. Young Tony Ross, Baltimore, welterweights; 4 rounds. Rated D. Cohen.

Spencer Bike Team Leads.

Kansas City, March 20 (AP).—Freddie Spencer, of Nutley, N. J., and Frank Keating, of New York, regained the lead at the seventy-second hour in Kansas City's 6-day bicycle races tonight with 335 points.

Bolton Jumps Bus, Disappears En Route To Doctor; Griffith Will Retire or Fine Him



Cliff Bolton, irrepressible backstop of the Nationals who recently complained of an illness, mysteriously disappeared from the Nats' Orlando training camp yesterday. He vanished in the middle of an exhibition game with the Phillies. Bolton had previously been ordered to report to Sanford, camp of the Chattanooga club, to receive treatment for an ailing shoulder.

Nats' Owner Will Seek Another Catcher to Bolster Staff.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—"Notice! Any person or persons knowing the whereabouts of Catcher Cliff Bolton will kindly communicate with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Ball Club."

It's a full-fledged mystery that the Nats' owner has on his hands down here at the Washington training camp.

The last seen of Bolton, the bottle-legged, thick-necked catcher was stomping his way out of a bus bound for nearby Sanford, Fla., yesterday and taking to the road, suit case under his arm, a mile out of Orlando.

Bolton was being dispatched to Sanford to receive treatments by Lee Jensen, trainer of the Washington-owned Chattanooga club, after complaning of a sore arm and shoulder, and intimating that he wanted to return to his High Point, N. C., home to recover.

Griffith persuaded him to proceed to Sanford instead, and after providing him with an expense account, shipped him with five rookies—Harry Kelley, Jim Wasdell, Frank Petticolas, Jake Early and Bill Phebus, who had been released to the Chattanooga club—on the bus.

Bolton Leaves Bus.

A mile out of town, according to reports received from the rookies, Bolton loudly shouted, "Stop this damn bus. I'm getting out." The driver complied and Bolton left.

Asked about Bolton's probable destination, Griffith replied irritably:

"Your guess is as good as mine. He may be going back to High Point or he may still be hanging around Orlando."

Teammates of Bolton believe that the errant catcher is headed back to his North Carolina home, for which he has always showed a great preference even when duty called for him to remain with the Nats.

His latest disappearance without notice is not Bolton's first. Last September, with the Nats in the thick of the fight for second place, Bolton complained that he was ill, disregarded Griffith's demands that he visit a Washington doctor, and quit the team for the rest of the season.

Bolton's case will be turned over to Baseball Commissioner Landis, said Griffith.

"He will either be placed on the retired list or the ineligible list. If Landis rules him ineligible, he will be subject to a fine if he wants to return to the club. I can't let this thing pass unnoticed."

Griff Seeks Catcher.

With only Shanty Hogan and Walter Millies remaining as experienced catchers, Griffith declared he will seek to sign another veteran in the event that Bolton does not return to the club. He will not recall Jake Early from Chattanooga, he said, as the latter needs the experience in the minors.

Throughout his stay with the Nats here, Bolton has been a moody individual, threatening to quit baseball one day and heatedly denying it the next. He has not been frequenting the players' usual haunts and during both seasons the club has trained here he has gained the reputation of being a "loner."

28 Fighters Left in A.A.U. Ring Tourney

National Guards Advance 7 Boxers to Semifinals, J. C. C., 6.

Twenty-eight willing glove wavers will swing fists next Wednesday night as the District A. A. U. boxing championships continue at Turner's Arena at 8 o'clock.

After the smoke of battle had cleared away from Saturday night's preliminary round, the Jewish Community Center had qualified six battlers while the National Guard had advanced seven to the semifinals. The Washington Boys Club, with three entries in the semifinals, still has an outside chance for team honors.

Buddy Lazear, Jimmy Willis, Eugene Glanzer, Gilbert Mayo, Bob Mathias and Steve Mamakos, the knockout kings of the tournament, will face real tests.

Lazear has drawn the hard-hitting Cline Shackelford, of the Terminal Y. Jimmy Willis will face Mayo in what is expected to be the bitterest contest of the night. Glanzer and Mamakos will square off against each other in the welterweight division, and Mathias has drawn J. Pompa.

second, and started a double play on his only fielding chance.

The expensive Boston Red Sox, directed by Joe Cronin, will provide the opposition for Clark Griffith's Washington Club on Tinker Field tomorrow.

The Red Sox will have on display two of the most widely publicized rookies in the American League—Second Baseman Bobby Doerr and Outfielder Dominic d'Allessandro.

Manager Bucky Harris will divide the Nats' pitching duties between Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver.

Over-indulgence in batting practice is taking its toll from Ben Chapman. The Nats' fleet center fielder is suffering from plainly blistered hands and may not appear against the Red Sox.

Baseball Leagues Meet.

A meeting of the Departmental Baseball League will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the Atlas Sports Store, 927 D street northwest. Teams wishing to enter must be represented. A meeting of the National City "A" League will be held at the same place, same time, Wednesday.

Bid $50,000 Under Champ's Demands

German's Guarantee, Increased by $100,000 Over Original Offer, Still Unacceptable; Gould Also Wants Garden's Hold Loosened.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—Heavyweight Champion Jim Braddock, still holding out for a $400,000 minimum, today turned down an offer of $350,000 for a title fight with Max Schmeling in Berlin this summer.

Although Schmeling told the titleholder the Deutsche Halle A. G. had increased its previous $250,000 guarantee by $100,000, Braddock, through his manager Joe Gould, refused to give up his $500,000 fight with Joe Louis in Chicago in June for less than the previous minimum he had set.

"In addition," Gould said, "Schmeling will have to straighten things out with Madison Square Garden and Promoter Mike Jacobs so that there will be no legal complications."

He referred to the contract Madison Square Garden holds for a Braddock-Schmeling title fight in its Long Island City bowl on June 3. Braddock turned his back on that contract to sign for the fight with Louis in Chicago.

Schmeling, making his announcement through his American representative, Joe Jacobs, said he also had offered Madison Square Garden $50,000 to release the Braddock-Schmeling fight, but that the Garden had refused it, pending court action they expect to take against the Louis-Braddock go.

"We've tried for 17 days since Schmeling reached here from Germany to get Braddock, the Garden and Mike Jacobs together," Joe Jacobs said. "This is our final offer. If it's not accepted by Tuesday it will be withdrawn."

"It's All Up to Schmeling"—Gould.

Schmeling's latest proposition, like the first, was made on behalf of the Berlin promoters, the Deutsche Halle A. G. He insisted there was nothing to any report that the German government is in back of the fight.

"The government's only concern," he said, "is in permitting the money to go out of the country tax free. The $350,000 would be posted in any bank outside of Germany or the United States stipulated by Gould.

"However, this offer stands only until Tuesday. If all parties concerned don't come to terms by then, the offer will be withdrawn. Schmeling will go into training for the June 3 fight, and will stand on his contract rights. We will not claim the title if Braddock doesn't appear June 3, but we suppose the State athletic commission will consider the matter."

JIMMY BRADDOCK.

Handball Play To Open Today

With the winners scheduled to participate in the national championships in Chicago Sunday, the seventh annual District A. A. U. four-wall handball championships open today at the Central Y. M. C. A.

All matches will be played in four days to enable the single and double champions to reach the nationals. Fourteen players are entered in the singles competition and eight teams in the doubles.

Joe Cowley, of the "Y," defending singles champ, will meet Leo Reugen, of the J. C. C., in the first round. Cowley and his partner, Channing Walker, defending doubles champions, open against the team of Tom Mangan, former District of Columbia tennis champion, and Walter Engelhardt.

New Records Steal Spotlight in Track

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—In spite of the new "zip" injected by those classy Kansans, Archie San Romani and Glenn Cunningham, the mile foot-racing business appears to have lost much of the indoor track spotlight this winter for the first time in several years, largely because of record-breaking exploits in other events.

Except on a few occasions, among them Cunningham's 4:08.7 time in the Casey meet last week and San Romani's two wins over the burly former collegian during the board campaigning, the middle distance dueling failed by considerable to come up to the heights of the Cunningham-Venzke-Bonthron rivalry.

At the same time, such other of the season's sensations as Don Lash's world record 8:28 two-mile, the high jumping feats climaxed last night by the all-time top leap of 6 feet 9¾ inches by Ohio State's Mel Walker in the Butler relays, and Oregon George Varoff's 14-foot 4⅞ pole vault, combined to steal the play away from the mile.

The Midwest had such star productions as the Indiana distance twins, Lash and Tommy Deckard, who set up a record 8:48.6 for the 3,000-meter steeplechase; Oklahoma Sam Allen, who posted the season's best times in four hurdle events, including a record 5.7 seconds for the 45-yard competition; High Jumpers Walker and Marquette's Ed Burke, who previously set a 6 feet 9¾ inches standard only to have his Ohio State rival better it, and Stan Birleson, of Michigan, whose 49.8 seconds for the 440 missed the existing mark by one-fifth second.

The East featured a set of surprisingly speedy sprinters, headed by Eulace Peacock, of Temple, with a 6-second flat record for 60 yards; Marty Glickman, of Syracuse, fith 8.7 for the 80 meters, three-tenths of a second better than the old mark, and Herb Weast, Columbia's "unknown," who furnished a 10.6 record time for the 100 meters; a middle-distance ace in Eddie O'Brien, another Syracuse Olympic runner, who posted a 57.6 mark for the 500 yards and added the best time of the season for the 600 meters, and a surprise weight man in Columbia's Francis Ryan, with a better-than-52-feet shot put, best of the winter.

In addition to Walker's startling high jump, San Romani furnished a high light in whipping Cunningham for the second time this year, although is 4:21.4 was nothing to cause excitement. Cornell, which is coming back to Eastern heights along with Columbia, swamped Syracuse and Colgate in their annual triangular meet by scoring 81 points, while at Chicago, Allan Tolmich, of Detroit's Wayne University, featured the Armour Tech Relays with victories in the 70-yard dash and 70-yard high and low hurdles.

Some of the season's best performances among standard events follow:

Running Events.

60-yard—Peacock (Temple), *6.0.
60-meter—Grieve (Illinois), 6.7.
80-meter—Glickman (Syracuse), *8.7.
100-meter—Weast, (Columbia) *10.6.
440-yard—Birleson (Michigan), 49.8.
500-yard—O'Brien (Syracuse), *57.6.
600-yard—Herbert (N. Y. U.), 1:12.6.
1,000-yard—Ray (New York), 2:14.4.
1,000-meter—Robinson (San Francisco), 2:29.4.
One-mile — Cunningham (New York), 4:08.7.
1,500-meter — San Romani (Kansas Teachers), 3:51.2.
Two-mile—Lash (Indiana), *8:58.
5,000-meter—Bright (San Francisco), 14:45.8.
3,000 steeplechase—Deckard (Indiana), *8:48.6.

Hurdles.

45-yard—Allen (Oklahoma), *5.7.
60-yard—O'Connor (Toronto), *7.3.

Relays.

1,000-meter—New York Curb Exchange, *1:59.7.
One-mile—Michigan, 3:20.4.
Two mile—Ohio State, 7:44.4.

Field Events.

High jump—Walker (Ohio State), 6 feet 9¾ inches.
Pole vault (board)—Varoff (Oregon), *14 feet 4⅞ inches.
Pole vault (dirt)—Meadows (Southern California), Ohe (Japan), *14 feet 3 inches.
Broad jump—Richardson (Toronto), 24 feet 7⅜ inches.
Shot put—Ryan (Columbia), 52 ft. ⅛ in.
35-pound weight—Folwartshny (Rhode Island State), 57 feet 6⅛ inches.

Badminton Tournament Listed for March 30

Entries for the National Capital Open Badminton championships to be held March 30 to April 6 at Eastern High School are being accepted by Bill Shreve at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest, he announced yesterday.

The tournament, under the auspices of the Eastern Badminton Club in co-operation with the East Washington Community Center, will consist of men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles. Entries close 1 p. m. Saturday.

6 Bike Teams Are Tied For Lead in Chicago

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—With nine hours to go, six of the nine teams in Chicago's thirty-seventh annual six-day bicycle race were tied for the lead. Today they were separated only by points.

In the technical lead were Aerts and Debruycker, the Belgians, with 104 points over the Frenchmen, Ignat and Diot.

driving in three runs that enabled the Detroit Tigers to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 2, today. The Sox made only three hits, combining two of them with a long fly to score one run off Schoolboy Rowe in the first. Their other counter came off McLaughlin in the seventh on an infield error. All of Detroit's runs came off Walberg in the fifth.

Cub Regulars Win.

Avalon, Calif.—The Chicago Cubs regulars finally caught up with the recruits today in intra-camp warfare, slamming Bill Lee and Clyde Shoun for 13 hits and a 9 to 3 victory, their first in four training games.

Al Epperly and Wes Flowers, who pitched for the regulars, gave nine hits, with the latter permitting only two in the last four innings. Lee was rapped for eight hits and five runs during his five innings.

Moses' Homer Wins for A's.

Mexico City.—Wally Moses, pressed into action late, connected with a home run with two mates aboard in his only batting chance to help the Philadelphia Athletics vanquish the Agriculture team in today's exhibition game, 7 to 3.

Moses, in three games since reaching camp, has made eight hits, including two home runs, in ten times at bat and has scored six runs. Last year he batted .345 in the American League competition.

George Turbeville pitched the full nine innings for the Macks—the first athletic pitcher to go the full route this year.

Browns Lose, 6 to 4.

San Antonio, Tex.—Hammering Big Jack Knott's offerings for four runs in the seventh inning, the Minneapolis Millers, of the American Association, scored an 8-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns here today.

Two other Brownie hurlers, Oral Hildebrand and Elon Hogsett, had held the Millers on even terms for six innings. Minneapolis used three pitchers, Wallie Tauscher, Reggie Grabowskii and Jake Boker, and the trio held the St. Louisans to nine hits.

Chisox Score, 10 to 7.

Ontario, Calif.—The Chicago White Sox slammed out 13 hits today to defeat Los Angeles, 10 to 7, for their second straight victory over the Pacific Coast leaguers.

Monty Stratton, John Whitehead and Vernon Kennedy, who worked three innings each, held the Angels to six hits, but were in difficulty through six errors behind them. Whitehead also was wild, walking four batsmen.

Cards Finally Win.

By the Associated Press.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 21.—The Cardinals came out of their four-game losing streak here today in a 5-to-2 victory over their American Association cousin, Columbus. The pickings were not so easy, however, for the Redbirds held only a one-run lead until Terry Moore rapped out a homer with a mate aboard in the eighth inning.

Frisch's men gathered eight hits, half of these divided by Moore and the young second baseman, Al Cuccinello. Columbus' four hits were off Bill McGee. He was relieved by Nathan Andrews, who pitched hitless ball during the last four innings.

Men Past 40
Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 6 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al, Selections at Tropical Park.

My friend, Fred Keats, of the New York Mirror, has the right idea about the big stake races. He believes some of the jockeys have a working agreement whereby those on inferior horses team with a boy who rides a contender. Keats contends that the jockeys run interference for a certain contender, thereby causing much of the rough riding that has marked big races. He recommends that all big races be limited to ten starters. He would have a series of eliminations for races like the Santa Anita, the Widener, the Derby and the Preakness, letting only the ten best horses go to the post. Keats says that bulky fields and horses that don't stand a chance are ruining the best of the Nation's stake events. I agree with him. My pal, J. Bowes Bond, of Baltimore, seems to be having a tough time at Hot Springs. I've been watching the results and from what I've seen he hasn't taken down a purse. However, he will be back in form at Charles Town. And, lest we forget, the Maryland season is sneaking up on us. Clocker Mike, the rascal, likes Galloping. You can have it. BILL.

First race—Bravo Caruso seems to have a race built to order for him in the day's opener. He gets in with a feather assignment and should make every post a winning one. Slippery Jim is a fair sort and should take the second money. Candar for the show end.

Second race—Ravenna likes the mile route and I'm going to try to make this one take the measure of the highly touted Opoca. War Rumor fits in this company and probably will be in the thick of contention.

Third race—Earl Porter appears to be a standout in this field. He draws a modest impost, and Le Blanc will do the riding. Terpsichore figures to do the No. 1 chasing. Inscona for the show money.

Fourth race—Backintime has been working briskly, and, as this field does not show a standout, I'm going to string along. The Maemere Farm Entry of Maesun and Maemute looms as a threat to the top one. High One may be better than generally rated.

Fifth race—Dusty Dawn gets the high weight assignment in this field, but needs only to run a real race. Zaca and Goldey F., in light, are likely to cause the top one the most trouble.

Sixth race—Rainland drops down in a spot that seems to point to a victory. Gets in with steadying weight. Candlelight and Daytonian to fight it out for the place award.

Seventh race—Myponne has been passed along to me as a good thing. I'm attracted by the possibility of a long price, and, if you want to take a chance, string along. Chambersburger and American Belle for the place and show.

Eighth race—Hot Cake, the one-time Charles Town ace, is in rare form. Any price will be a good one. Drusus looms as the one to beat. Treasurer Ship may upset the talent.

Ninth (substitute) race—If this race is used, I'll take Torquil, Ubald G. and Ballot Boy.

Choral Concert Planned Here Easter Sunday

Schola Cantorum to Sing Haydn and Mascagni Selections.

The Schola Cantorum, an old-world institution dating back more than 200 years, but new to Washington musical audiences, will make its bow in the National Capital Easter Sunday, when the National Capital Parks Schola will be heard in a sunrise concert in the Sylvan Theater of the Washington Monument Grounds. The concert is scheduled for 7 a. m.

Schola Cantorum, according to Maestro Arturo Papalardo, director of the local group, is the classic Latin name for a large group of mixed voices specializing in both symphonic choral music and sacred literature. Papalardo, who has conducted opera and coached internationally famous divas on both sides of the Atlantic, explained no large city in Europe is without a schola cantorum, but that New York and Washington were the only American cities in which these choral groups have been organized. The New York group was formed by Walter Damrosch.

For the Easter sunrise concert, Papalardo has selected four of the most famous selections from Haydn's "Creation" and the popular Easter hymn from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana." More than 200 voices are included in the group. Rehearsals for the concert have been in progress for more than two months, the final rehearsals being scheduled for tomorrow and Thursday nights.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent, National Capital Parks, announced today that in the event of inclement weather the concert will be held in the department auditorium, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets.

Medal Sought For Rescuer of Drowning Boy

Crisfield Youth Plunges Into Icy Harbor to Save 6-Year-Old.

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., March 21.—Raymond Morgan, 22-year-old bookkeeper, may receive a medal for plunging into the icy waters of the harbor and rescuing 6-year-old Gilbert Morgan from drowning.

Civic leaders said today they would gladly join in a movement to recommend Morgan for a Carnegie medal or some other suitable award for his heroism.

The 6-year-old boy had slipped from a drawbridge and tumbled into the water. Morgan saw the youngster's plight from a window of a nearby building where he worked. He dashed from the building and, without stopping to remove his clothing, dove into the 18-foot deep harbor to make the rescue.

He succeeded in carrying the boy to the edge of the wharf, where he was aided by Dale Lawson and Clinton Tawes in getting to safety. He was exhausted when he was pulled onto the wharf.

After first aid treatment, the child he rescued was taken home to recover from the shock and exposure.

Virginia Art Group To Meet on April 3

Richmond, March 21 (AP).—J. Gordon Bohannan said today that the annual meeting of the Virginia Art Alliance will be held April 3 in the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts here.

Three new members of the board of trustees will be named and activities and progress of art in Virginia during the past year will be studied.

Harriette P. Gayle, executive secretary of the activities committee, reported that "there were 19 exhibitions included in the list sent out last October to members of the alliance and to about 50 other art organizations in the State."

Bank Official to Speak.

Purcellville, Va.—R. J. Roberts, assistant cashier of the Riggs National Bank, will be the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Clearing House Association of Loudoun, Fauquier and Prince William Counties, which will be held Tuesday night in the social hall of the Bethany Methodist Church in Purcellville. Mr. Roberts will speak on "Public Relations." The Ladies Aid Society will serve supper.

Auction Sales

THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1937—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE BUSINESS PROPERTY, 62-64 H STREET NORTHEAST.

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, passed in Equity Cause No. 61124, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of the premises, on THURSDAY, THE TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF MARCH, 1937, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described real estate, situate in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Parts of lots 3, 4 and 5, and all of lot 6 and the east one-half of lot 7 in J. Harry Thompson, trustees' subdivision of Square 676, as per plat recorded in Liber W. F., folio 109, of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, now being designated on the books of the assessor of the District of Columbia for taxation purposes as Lots 801 and 803 in Square 676, fully described in the final decree appointing trustees for sale of real estate, improved by premises 62 and 64 H street northeast.

TERMS OF SALE: Property to be sold subject to the unpaid balance of a first (but not association) deed of trust amounting to approximately $14,991.05, together with interest at 6% from February 9, 1937, and subject further to the unpaid balance of a second deed of trust of approximately $6,468.05, together with interest at 6% from December 30, 1935; over and above said encumbrances, one-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, the balance in two equal installments payable to the purchaser by promissory notes of the purchaser, payable in one and two years, with interest at 6% per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 required of purchaser at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, March 8, 1937. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on December 14, 1936, in the matter of closing certain streets and alleys, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "ORDERED, That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, TODD PLACE and U STREET between 2nd and 3rd Streets N.E., and PUBLIC ALLEYS in Square 3585, are hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after March 30, 1937, all as shown on Map Numbered 2004 in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, the title to the land comprised in the area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closings in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on March 30, 1937, as aforesaid, and said streets and alleys shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act.

JANE ARDEN — Dirty Work — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

EVERYTHING OKAY, JANE?
WE'RE NEARLY ACROSS AND NO TROUBLE YET!
I'M THE ONE WHO FOOLED THE SECRET AGENTS!
HERE COMES A STEWARD- LET HIM HAVE IT WHEN I SAY THE WORD-LEAVE IT TO ME!
NOW!
SMACK!

THE G-MAN! — BY GEORGE CLARK AND LOU HANLON

THE CAPTAIN OF THE SHIP HAS RECOGNIZED THE SPIES AND WARNED THEM NOT TO MAKE TROUBLE.
WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE HE MEANT?
YOU KNOW WHAT HE MEANT,- THE GERMAN!
WE DIDN'T DO IT!
NO BUT YOU KNOW WHO DID!
HSST!!
ME MISERABLE MAN EMPLOY FOR BORIS? AT YOUR SERVICE, PLEASE!
FROM BORIS?
GOOD!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

WAHOO! GO BACK! THESE HOODLUMS HIRED BY THE DUKE OF BURPINGHAM ARE OUT TO KEEP YOU AWAY FROM MINNIE-HA-CHA AT ANY PRICE!
BURY ME NOT ON UM LONE PRAIREEE!
OKAY, BOYS! LET'S TEAR THE LITTLE RED RUNT TO PIECES!
GRRR! LOOK OUT, HALF-PINT, I'M GONNA EAT YOU ALIVE!
GO AHEAD! BUT WHAT YOU USE FOR TEETH?
HALP! POLICE!
YIPPEE! LOOKS AS IF THE DUKE OF BURPINGHAM'S PLOT HAD GONE HAYWIRE!

LALA PALOOZA — A Perfect Housekeeper — By Rube Goldberg

TSK, TSK, DUST ON THE PIANO- BABETTE, DON'T BE SO UNTIDY
YES, MADAM- SORRY
I WISH PEOPLE WOULD STOP PUTTIN' WET GLASSES ON MY POLISHED TABLES- LOOK AT THOSE WATER RINGS!
YES, MADAM- SO SORRY
AN' LOOK HOW THAT PICTURE'S HANGING- TSK, TSK- I CAN'T STAND ANYTHING MESSY
NOW AIN'T THAT CUTE!
YES, MADAM

and underneath it all, your lingerie and foundation, too, must say

LOOK PRETTY, PLEASE!

Our grandmothers called them whalebones and petticoats—but regardless of their names, it's your lingerie and foundation that will make or mar your Easter prettiness. Every woman knows that nothing gives her the satisfaction of perfect grooming that she gets from a smooth, sleek girdle and perfectly cut, good-to-look-at underthings. Both Van Raalte and Bien Jolie are masters at making your intimate garments say "look pretty, please." Both are famous for their perfect fit and fine quality—and last, but by no means least, the prices are so low that you can buy lavishly for all your needs.
